Thermostats Down—Nixon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon has appealed to Americans voluntarily to spend a slightly chillier, slower-moving, more thrifty winter to stave off what he called the worst fuel shortage since the Second World War.

Nixon also proposed a national program comparable in scope to developing the atom bomb and putting men in space, aimed at making the country self-sufficient in energy by 1980.

Saying a long-forming shortage, plus the effect of the Middle East crisis, will leave the United States short of oil by 2 to 3 million barrels a day, Nixon asked congress Wednesday for more power and asked the people to sacrifice energy luxuries until the pinch is over.

If that does not work, he warned, Americans may have the first direct consumer rationing of gasoline since the 1940s.

Nixon told the nation in a broadcast speech, and in a separate message to Congress, he is ordering that power plants be kept from switching from coal to oil, directing that aircraft get less fuel, asking that Americans turn their home thermostats down to 68 degrees and ordering the federal bureaucracy to use less heat and light and drive government cars more slowly.

He said he is asking that nuclear power permits be expedited and is requesting governors and local officials to do at their level things similar to what Nixon is ordering at the federal level.

"We are heading toward the most acute shortages of energy since the Second World War," Nixon said.

"The fuel crisis need not mean genuine suffering for any American," he added. "But it will require some sacrifice by all Americans. We must be sure that our most vital needs are met first—and that our least important activities are the first to be cut back. And we must be sure that while the fat from our economy is being trimmed, the muscle is not seriously damaged."

Nixon asked Congress for authority to bring Daylight Saving Time back for the whole year, to ease clean air requirements so as to allow more use of coal, to hold stores to briefer work days, to cut speed limits on federal highways and to produce more oil from federal reserves.

The new laws, presidential directives and belt-tightening could erase the oil deficit in the short run, he said; reducing highway speeds could save 600,000 barrels of oil a day; cooler homes and offices

'I WON'T RESIGN'

WASHINGTON — President Nixon says he has "no intention whatever of walking away from the job I was elected to do."

Nixon said at the end of a national television-radio address on the energy crisis Wednesday:

"I have no intention whatever of walking away from the job I was elected to do. As long as I am physically able, I am going to continue to work 16 to 18 hours a day for the cause of a real peace abroad, and for the cause of prosperity without inflation and war at home."

Ottawa To Buy Oil

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government has empowered a Crown agency to buy crude and refined oil on international markets, increasing speculation that a national petroleum corporation may not be far away.

"I would think within a month we'd know one way or the other," Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said Wednesday.

He told the Commons the Canadian Commercial Corp. (CCC), an agency responsible to the supply and services department, has been authorized to buy all the oil it can to reduce the impact of potential energy shortages in eastern Canada this winter.

He also disclosed Canada is ready to bypass industry and negotiate a government-to-government agreement with Venezuela, guaranteeing long-term crude oil supplies.

Both steps appeared to move the government closer to the concept of a national petroleum corporation, but Macdonald said no decision has been made.

The major task of the CCC will be to buy refined petroleum products wherever available on foreign markets. Any supplies obtained would be stored primarily in defence department facilities and distributed on a most-urgent-need basis if shortages developed.

Macdonald said it is doubtful the corporation can buy

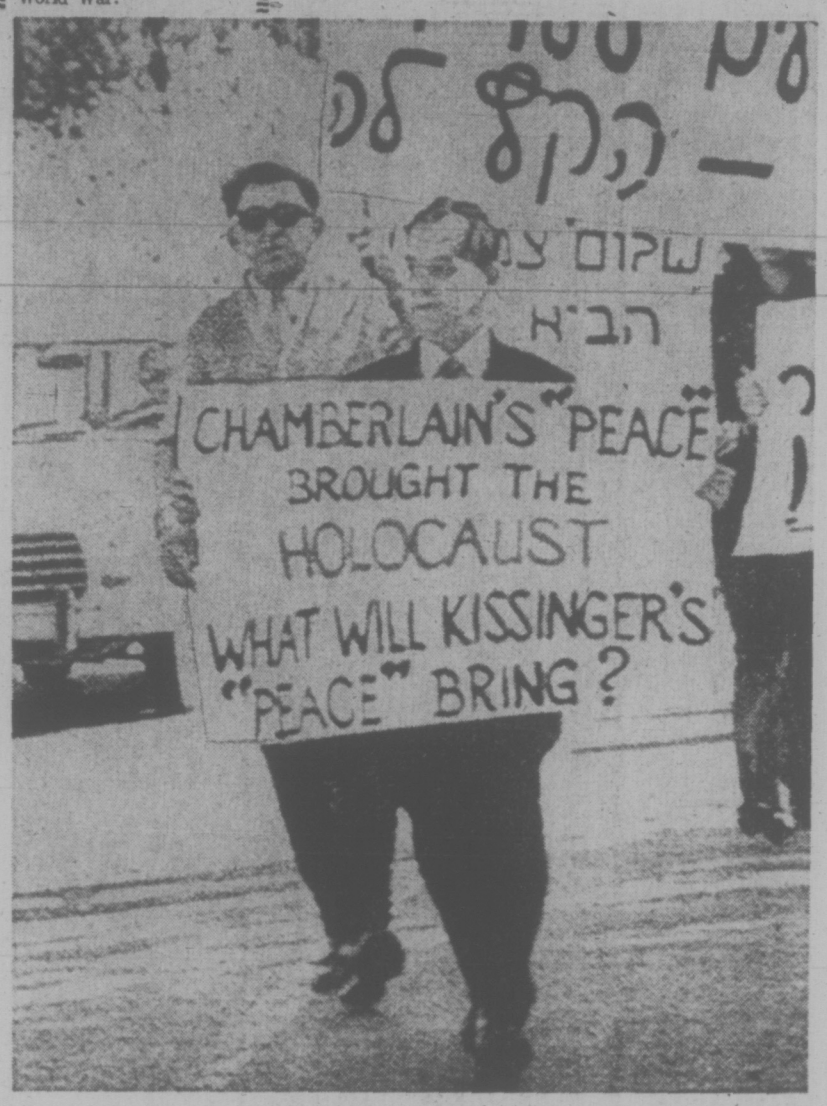
Kissinger Assailed

Protesters outside the Israeli parliament today, denounced the terms of the peace accord accepted by their leaders. They likened U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger to British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain who tried to bargain with Hitler prior to the Second World War.



Israel Takes Truce Terms

Times News Services

Israel today accepted a U.S. truce proposal whereby, government sources said, it would partially lift the encirclement of the Egyptian 3rd Army in return for a prisoner exchange and the end to the blockage of the port of Eilat on the Red Sea.

The peace package was worked out with the Egyptians in Cairo by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and brought to Prime Minister Golda Meir's government Wednesday night by assistant secretary of state Joseph Sisco.

Mrs. Meir's cabinet gave its blessing to the plan in a special morning meeting; she met Sisco for 90 minutes to discuss further details.

He then flew to Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, to join Kissinger.

According to Israeli sources, the plan comes in the following parts:

—Israel will allow a UN-supervised supply corridor to the Egyptian 3rd Army, whose 20,000 men are surrounded on the southern end of the Suez, so long as Cairo does not have full control of the route. No military supplies will be allowed in.

—There will be full exchange of prisoners of war with Egypt, beginning as soon as possible with the wounded. Israel holds about 8,000 Egyptian prisoners while listing about 350 of its men missing on the southern front.

—The Egyptians will lift their blockade of Eilat which has prevented ships arriving from or departing to Asia.

U.S. officials said the peace talks apparently would involve negotiations between Arabs and Israelis, with perhaps a third party involved.

The U.S. would play an active role in the talks, expected to begin before the end of the year, they said.

Kissinger, in comments to newsmen today before leaving Cairo, said, "the day-and-a-half I have spent here have shown good progress in establishing a framework for a just and lasting peace in the Middle East."

In his Riyadh talks with Saudi Arabia's King Faisal, Kissinger is to discuss both the Middle East conflict and the Arab oil boycott. Saudi Arabia was America's chief Arab oil supplier before the boycott.

HOPE SNOWED IN, ALBERTA FROZEN

Winter flicked at the Fraser Valley's vulnerable spots Wednesday causing several power blackouts and scores of motor accidents. On the Prairies cold records tumbled.

Snow, ranging in depth from two to eight inches brought near blizzard conditions from the Abbotsford-Mission area east to the Fraser Canyon.

A foot of snow fell in the Hope area in the 24-hour period to midnight and caused near-blizzard conditions in the canyon.

Meanwhile centres across the prairies reported the coldest temperatures ever recorded for Nov 7, the fifth consecutive day for record-breaking lows.

Calgary and Edmonton International Airport recorded temperatures overnight of 20 below, the weather office said early today.

Calgary's previous low for Nov. 7 was 12 below in 1919 while Edmonton International Airport, a relatively-new facility, had three below in 1966.

Medicine Hat was 19 below for a Nov. 7 record, 10 degrees colder than the previous mark set in 1936 and 1945.

Lethbridge hit 17 below, breaking the record of 11 below set in 1936.

In Saskatchewan, Swift Current recorded 11 below, breaking the previous mark for the day set in 1925 of 10 below. Kindersley dropped to a record of 10 below, 10 degrees colder than the previous record set in 1942.

Tapes Not Audible

WASHINGTON — Parts of the subpoenaed Watergate tapes are very poor in quality, and it is humanly impossible to hear every word on them, President Nixon's personal secretary testified today.

Rose Mary Woods, Nixon's secretary for more than two decades, said that it took her nearly a month, working sometimes on weekends and far into the night, to type a rough transcript of seven conversations between Nixon and figures in the Watergate political espionage case.

"The quality is very bad on some, depending on the room (in which they were recorded)," Miss Woods told Judge John Sirica.

"There are lots of funny things on it. If the president put his feet up on the desk — as he sometimes does — it sounds like a bomb in your ear. Or if someone brings a cup of coffee in and puts it down on the desk . . . it's difficult.

"Sometimes I could hear the president whistling. Other times, there were four people talking at once and I couldn't even get one voice."

Miss Woods said she did not know anything about the white house recording system until its existence was disclosed in testimony before the Senate Watergate Committee July 16.

She said she never heard any of the tapes until the weekend of Sept. 29, when she was asked to go to Camp David to help transcribe them.

"I went up there to try to listen — I use that word advisedly — to take down as much as possible of the tapes that were subpoenaed," she testified.

She said she worked from that Saturday morning until 3 a.m. Sunday, got three hours sleep and worked through until Sunday evening.

"I had gone up there thinking I could finish it in one weekend and came back without finishing one," she said. "And I don't mean one tape, I mean just one conversation."

H. R. Haldeman, Nixon's former chief-of-staff, who like Miss Woods has listened to some of the tapes, also was summoned by Sirica to testify at the hearings on the recordings and White House claims that tapes were not made, as previously believed, of two key Watergate conversations by the president.

Miss Woods said she returned to Washington with the president on Sunday, Sept. 30, and continued working on the

MILK PRICE UP A CENT

The price of milk is going up a cent a quart within days and probably another cent will be added in early December, Agriculture Minister David Stupich said today.

Stupich said the increases were necessary because of increased feed costs to the province's dairy industry, particularly hay.

The authority given the B.C. Milk Board to raise prices partially cancels out the federal government's subsidy program which went into effect last month, resulting in lowering the price of milk by four cents per quart.

Stupich said he has notified Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan of B.C.'s intention to raise milk prices.

Formal announcement of the increase should come within days, he said, and will probably take effect immediately.

(The dairy industry on Vancouver Island is facing disaster — unless the government acts soon to save it, according to a Saanichton area farmer. See Page 6.)

Normally, increases in milk prices are announced at the beginning of the month in

Fall Session Ends

The first complete fall session of the B.C. legislature—labelled by opposition members as unnecessary—ended Wednesday after eight weeks of deliberations.

Chief Justice J. L. Farris, acting in place of Lieutenant-Governor Walter Owen, prorogued the house at 6:15 p.m. Wednesday after giving royal assent to 68 government bills.

The session, represented by the government at the outset as being mainly for the purpose of bringing in new agriculture and labor legislation, contained few surprises.

Premier Dave Barrett has gone to great pains to establish the government's policy of having two full sessions per year, thereby giving MLAs a minimum of $24,000 per year and cabinet ministers $48,000.

But opposition parties said throughout the session that nowhere near eight weeks should have been necessary to consider the legislation. It was argued the government dragged its feet preparing the legislation with the result that inordinate time earlier in the session was spent debating housekeeping measures. (For opposition leaders' comments see Page 3.)

The single outstanding legislative measure approved was a new labor code which will govern the collective bargaining practices of labor and management groups in the province.

The bill—the Labor Code of B.C. Act—was subjected to the closest scrutiny of the session with opposition members proposing many amendments, all but one of which was rejected by the government.

The labor legislation's main thrust is establishment of a powerful new Labor Relations Board, which will play a much more active role in direct labor negotiations than did its predecessor.

Also in the labor field was legislation to give the province's civil servants collective bargaining rights for the first time, along with the right to strike.

Agricultural measures included a guaranteed income plan and provision of easier credit for farmers. The government argued these measures, along with several other less significant steps, will encourage farmers to stay on the land which the government froze for agricul-

Smokes Rising In Cost Soon

TORONTO (CP) — Leading cigarette manufacturers said Wednesday Canadian smokers can expect to pay more for cigarettes and cigars in 1974, if not earlier.

They said sharply higher production costs are exerting upward pressure on domestic cigarette prices, last raised by manufacturers a year ago.

The federal income tax relief they received this year has more than been offset by increases in the cost of services, power and labor in tobacco purchases, manufacturers said.

R. H. Hawkes, president of Rothmans of Pall Mall Canada Ltd., Toronto, said labor costs and the price of leaf tobacco "are the two major factors" influencing cigarette prices at the manufacturers' level. Rothmans is involved in labor contract negotiations.

Charles F. Lombard, president of Benson and Hedges Tobacco Ltd., also expressed dismay about cost increases affecting all areas of the company's production and distribution.

"It extends to the fuel used in our salesmen's cars and in the servicing of cars," he said.

Paul Pare, president of Imasco Ltd. of Montreal, said "we have had very significant increases in paper, oil, services and in the basic cost of tobacco." These increases have "far exceeded" the relief provided by reduced federal income taxes.

Ontario tobacco growers, however, dispute that tobacco price increases are a factor in the cost squeeze, saying they are receiving less for their tobacco than they did last year.

Just Staying Alive Is Deadly

OTTAWA (CP)—"Howard insists that we end the food study. All have lost weight and Andrew still has diarrhea, probably because of the excessive amounts of powdered skim milk he was drinking.

"He usually drinks very little milk, but demanded a great deal during the study as he was hungry. I have a miserable cold and have lost all energy for cooking, caring for the house, etc.

"Everyone's temper has been on edge for the past three days—even to the point of argument over portions of food. Jon feels his father shouldn't have more than he.

"Howard and I agreed that we now see why welfare recipients are often sick, seem lackadasical about finding work they are probably too tired from a poor diet to care and often drop out of retraining."

The preceding statements portray the reactions of one of several families who attempted to live on minimum food budgets drawn up by the agriculture department.

The statements were from Sandra Eddy and lives in Aylmer, Que., with her husband Howard and their sons Jonathan, 10 and Andrew, 3.

Only one family of several tested, Mr. and Mrs. Sikander Turabali and two daughters of Ottawa, say they were able to live comfortably within the confines of the budget, largely because they were used to eating protein-rich lentils instead of meat.

These findings were released Wednesday by the Consumers' Association of Canada following tests with a group of volunteers earlier this year. The report was published in the association's bi-monthly Canadian Consumer publication.

Playground Fight Fatal

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — A 13-year-old boy who suffered critical injuries in a fight with several other boys in a schoolyard Oct. 12 died in hospital Wednesday.

Dean Yutronkie, a Grade 8 pupil at St. Patrick's Roman Catholic separate school who went into a coma two weeks ago died without regaining consciousness.

The boy's father, Leonard Yutronkie, said his son's head was pounded against the schoolyard pavement.

AS HUTCHISON SAW IT

Former Times editor Bruce Hutchison has just completed a visit to Washington where, in what is perhaps the U.S. capital's deepest crisis of the century, he has talked with political leaders, expert analysts and the man-in-the-street. Based on his informed observations, a penetrating series of articles begins on page 4 of today's Times portraying what is now happening in the United States, and what it may mean to Canadians.

FERRY FLEET FOR $1

WEST VANCOUVER (CP) — The municipality of West Vancouver, for the modest price of $1, has entered the ferry business.

Of course, with inflation, a dollar doesn't buy a very big ferry fleet. In fact, it buys a 12- by 5-foot scow with a seat in the middle and a winch at each end.

But no matter, approximately 40 persons use the man-powered Eagle Island ferry daily to cross a 75-yard channel between the island and the mainland.

"The British Columbia government has boasted of having the world's largest ferry fleet," said Mayor Art Langley after council voted unanimously to buy the scow. "Now West Vancouver operates the smallest ferry fleet in the world."

He termed the ferry the ultimate non-polluting service.

"It has no toilets, no holding tanks, no gas and no oil to foul our waters," he said.

The ferry was designed and built by Gordon Keillor, a retired engineer, in 1968 when he and his wife moved to Eagle Island.

He wanted something that could be pulled by chains from either side and could be operated by residents of the 35 homes on the island, said Mrs. Keillor.

Profit Comes First

WASHINGTON (AP-Reuter) — A government report indicates United States fuel oil exports in 1973 "will drastically surpass 1972" despite a serious domestic shortage. Some of these shipments will go to Europe.

A Cost of Living Council study requested by Democratic Representative Les Aspin predicts that 53.3 million gallons of fuel oil will be exported during 1973, almost triple the 1972 total.

However, the study said, "1972 was a depressed year and the rise in 1973 appears to be a return to a historical export level."

"Apparently the lure of big profits is persuading major oil companies to export desperately needed fuel oil despite the shortage," Aspin said. "It is nothing less than a total disregard for the welfare of the American consumer which leads to these tremendous exports of fuel oil during the shortage."

could save 640,000 barrels; cutting air flights, 170,000; converting power plants to coal, 430,000; increasing federal oil reserves' production, 160,000; and boosting production of oil from non-governmental wells, 350,000 barrels daily.

Only if those things don't work, Nixon said, will he turn to gasoline rationing on the Second World War coupon-cutting level.

One offbeat problem arising from Nixon's appeal to lower thermostats has aleady been pointed out—art schools will find it more difficult to hire nude models.

"When we go to hire nude models, one of the things they always ask is, how warm is the room?" William Davis, New England School of Art administrator said.

Davis said Wednesday night he was concerned whether the school might be granted an exemption from the 10 degree heat reduction Nixon called for in commercial buildings.

He said, when it comes to hiring nude models, room temperatures are "a real problem for us, even when you can heat the place. What do you do . . . close the school?"

enough oil to cope with a serious shortage. He declined to estimate how much could be available in current tight market situations.

The cost of any oil obtained by the CCC will be high but the government hopes to recover the money when the oil is used, he said.

Some officials have indicated the corporation will try to buy about one million barrels of heating oil. This amount would have no lasting effect if normal supplies are badly interrupted.

While the CCC will have authority to buy crude oil, Macdonald said, its primary interest will be to locate refined products.

However, the corporation could negotiate a bilateral deal with Venezuela. Canada's willingness to enter such an agreement has been communicated to Venezuelan authorities by Canadian officials in South America, he told MPs.

Placing this authority in the hands of the CCC does not rule out future establishment of another body "with broader powers" to handle similar functions, he said.

Canada imports more than 850,000 barrels of crude oil daily to supply refineries in eastern Canada. More than 40 per cent of the total comes from Venezuela.

Macdonald also said if voluntary restraints on the use of energy fail, the government will impose mandatory controls on energy use.

Macdonald said in an extreme situation there would be a rationing ssytem "similar to what we had during the Second World War."

The federal government might also recommend voluntary restrictions on Sunday driving if the energy situation becomes critical.

But the request would be made only if shortages rise above 25 per cent and the government is forced to adopt emergency rationing measures, Macdonald told reporters.

. . . B.C. SESSION ENDS

tural use at the spring session.

A major issue in the latter part of the session turned out to be government regulation of petroleum resources in the province. The Petroleum Corporation Act, opposed by all three opposition parties, establishes a provincial marketing agency for petroleum and natural gas so the government itself can produce and distribute petroleum resources. This would derive more cash for the provincial treasury.

Legislation establishing three new departments got considerable attention from the opposition — with particular criticism levelled at Lorne Nicolson, soon-to-be housing minister.

Nicolson, and the government, was flailed for hazy housing policies proposed so far and the government's apparent insistence that whatever policies are developed will have to wait until next spring's budget.

Transport Minister Robert Strachan got a rough ride on numerous occasions, as the principal target of opposition snipers during daily question periods and then being accused — and subsequently cleared — of lying to the house.

The legislation setting up Strachan's new transport and communications department was the last approved.

On the other hand, the establishment of the consumer services department under Phyllis Young got general support from all parties.

Human rights legislation, introduced only days before the end of the session, got rapid approval. The new human rights bill puts teeth in the enforcement of discriminatory practices and, combined with a tough Personal Information Reporting Act, provides a significant amount of protection for the individual.

The only notable piece of legislation affecting native Indians in the province was a bill providing for an outright grant of $3 million to a group of Indians on the north coast to establish a fish cannery. The government intends to lend up to a further $3 million for the project.

From a political point of view, the presence for the first time of Bill Bennett, son of former premier W. A. C. Bennett, had no noticeable impact on the house. Bennett maintained a low profile in preparation for a Social Credit leadership convention later this month, at which he is considered the front-running candidate.

tapes for almost a month. Once she said, on Oct. 4, she sequestered herself at Key Biscayne, Fla., and worked while Secret Service agents guarded the tapes.

Miss Woods said she made a single typewritten copy of her transcriptions with no carbons.

Her typewriter ribbons were burned to prevent anyone from reading words which might be left on them, she said.

Her final product "was give directly, personally by me to the president," Miss Woods testified.

President Nixon's chief campaign fund-raiser among Spanish-speaking Americans, meanwhile, is coming before the Senate Watergate committee to give his version of a charge he offered federal favoritism for a $100,000 campaign contribution.

The allegations came before the committee Wednesday in testimony from Florida home builder John Priestes.

The committee scheduled an appearance for today for Benjamin Fernandez, the man named by Priestes.

Priestes said Fernandez told him his (Priestes) legal problems with the Federal Housing Administration might be solved if he contributed $100,000 to the campaign.

Priestes said Fernandez arranged a meeting with former commerce secretary Maurice Stans, the head of the Nixon campaign's finance committee.

He said Stans indicated he would discuss the Priestes problem with George Romney, secretary of the department of housing and urban development.

In Miami, C. G. (Bebe) Rebozo, a close friend of Nixon, has filed a $10-million libel suit aginst the Washington Post.

Lawyers representing Rebozo filed the suit Wednesday, charging The Post libelled the Key Biscayne banker in an Oct. 25 article that claimed Rebozo cashed $91,500 in stolen stocks in 1968 after being told they were stolen.

Rebozo's suit charges the story was false and malicious.

Bare Survival Deadly

The association says the reports cast doubt both on the food and minimum nutrition levels normally recommended for a healthy diet.

The agriculture department budgets "require an above-average knowledge of nutrition in order to survive, yet are geared to the lowest income groups who often do not have access to information or the energy to sustain the continual vigilance required to keep the right kind of food on the table."

The report concludes with this statement:

"A diet may look very pretty on paper, guinea pigs may thrive on it, but can the human spirit survive?"

Moct of the 14 volunteers in the experiment would tend to answer no.

Mr. and Mrs. Eddy agreed to spend roughly $20 for a week's food. Most expensive items were $2.07 for three pounds of hamburger, $1.23 for three pounds of skim milk powder and $1.12 for two pounds of fish fillets.

The remainder of their diets was made up of peanut butter, vegetables, a dozen eggs, condiments, bread and the like.

The consumers' association suggests that their study be used as a springboard for a controlled six-month experiment to determine the long-range effects of marginal diets on physical energy, morale, will to succeed and general health.

. . . MILK PRICE RISING CENT A QUART

which they are to take effect. This months' increase will be different, Stupich said.

Victoria milk distributors can be expected to pass the hike on to their customers.

"It (the price) naturally goes up to us," one dairy spokesman said, "and we have to pass it along."

Another dairy spokesman said prices of homogenized milk would jump from 83 cents for half a gallon to 85 cents, $1.20 for three quarts to $1.23, and 45 cents for one quart to 46 cents.

Mrs. Norma Andrews, president of the Victoria branch of the Consumers Association of Canada, today urged individual action by concerned consumers.

"Everyone has to have milk," she said, advocating that people write their MLAs, as well as Stupich.

She said milk prices "didn't drop enough after the federal subsidy went into effect."

Mrs. Ada Brown of Vancouver, provincial vice-president of the CAC, also urged that people write the provincial government.

"I think it's a real shame," she said, "that families have barely had a chance to reap the benefit of the four per cent subsidy before it's already being whittled away.

"Families really appreciated that help and it helped young people to get more of the milk they need."

Mrs. Brown questioned the distribution of the federal subsidy.

"I understand that it was a five per cent subsidy," she said, "but the consumer only got the benefit of four cents. What happened to the one cent that was held back?"

She added, "Did the cent go to another section, the distributors, or did it go to the producers?"

She said she had discussed the problem of spiralling milk prices with members of the milk board and people in agriculture and had to concede that farming was "a tricky business."

"It seems to depend a lot on the size of the farm," she said, "Some appear to be doing all right and some are suffering under the system."

She said Vancouver Island dairy farmers had "been pretty vocal" in their demands to the provincial government for increased help and it was only right that the consumers' voice should be equally heard.

Session Called 'Unnecessary'

Leaders of two opposition parties in the legislature branded the recent session "unnecessary" Wednesday while Conservative leader Scott Wallace and Premier Dave Barrett defended it as worthwhile.

Social Credit leader Frank Richter said the government "by no means" has established the necessity of having two sessions a year and said only 10 per cent of the legislation passed should have come before the house at this session.

Richter said there were "some important bills" "foreign" to the free enterprise concept. He added the session could have been taken care of in "a short period of time."

Richter said the government was not prepared to introduce its legislation and took up too much of the opposition's time.

Liberal Leader David Anderson said the session proved two things — that Barrett felt he needs to justify a $24,000 a year salary for MLAs by holding two sessions and that he intends to "get rid" of people like Dave Brousson, the Liberal member who resigned because of business commitments.

The session could easily have been completed in two weeks, Anderson said.

He said a number of alternatives would solve the problem of "unnecessary" sittings. Members could be given a straight monthly salary, for example, and the session could be called whenever needed.

The Liberal said he didn't feel guilty picking up his $12,000 end-of-session cheque, however, since he said he works at the job year-round.

The high point of the session, he said, was the labor code but he was quick to criticize the government for not accepting any of the almost 40 "substantial" amendments his party proposed for the bill.

"We made the mistake, in opposition, of taking the government at its word that they would be interested in our amendments," Anderson said.

The session's low point, he said, was the performance of Transport Minister Robert Strachan, who "totally destroyed himself as a minister."

Conservative leader Wallace took a different tack saying the session was "very worthwhile" and that the government "in its own way dealt with the important current issues."

The session was necessary, he said, because it dealt with pressing issues of labor, petroleum and housing.

Wallace said, however, he was disappointed with the government's trend towards "an authoritarian, centralist philosophy of government, centralizing power in cabinet, ministers, boards, crown corporations and committees."

The two worst aspects of the session he said, are the lack of appeal in decisions of the Labor Relations Board and the minimal appeal procedures given teachers who are censured by the B.C. Teachers' Federation.

Highlight of the sitting "has to be the Human Rights Code," he said, even though it may not go far enough.

Premier Barrett's only comment of the session was that he considered the agricultural and labor legislation to be the highlights.

OPPOSITION'S DELAY FAILS

An opposition move to have the government's final bill of the session hoisted for six months was defeated in the legislature Wednesday.

Don Phillips (SC-South Peace River) proposed an amendment which would have tabled the bill creating the department of transport and communications.

Despite combined opposition support for the amendment, the original bill passed to wind up the fall session.

The bill was a contentious one, not only because it gives Transport Minister Robert Strachan wide powers to take over any operation in the transportation and communications field, but because Strachan has come under intense opposition criticism in recent weeks.

Bob McClelland (SC-Langley), the MLA who only Monday accused Strachan of lying to the house, said the bill will give the minister wide powers to take over the cablevision industry, which he said is perfoming an excellent public service now.

He spoke also about the power of the department to enter the information distribution field and perhaps begin to insert editorial censorship on its contents.

Liberal leader David Anderson said he was "appalled by the amount of power given to the minister and his cabinet" in the bill, adding that "no minister should be given such powers."

Garde Gardom (L-Vancouver-Point Grey) said the powers of the bill could lead to an authoritarian state.

Pipeline Sidelined

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bold push for passage of a bill authorizing immediate construction of the Alaska pipeline failed Wednesday because of a drafting error.

The measure was sent back to House-Senate conferees to rewrite a controversial section.

Both the House of Representatives and the Senate had been expected to approve the measure quickly, sending the bill to the White House for President Nixon's signature.

The push for passage came as the fuel crisis in the U.S. become more critical following further curtailment of Arabian oil exports.

After a brief meeting, the conferees said they would seek waiver of a House rule requiring a three-day wait before action of a conference committee can be voted on the floor.

Rejection of the request would delay action on the pipeline bill until next week.

NEED OF NEW CITIES: NEW URBAN METHODS

OTTAWA (CP) — Old methods of community planning must change if Canada is going to provide satisfactory living space for an estimated 12 million additional urban residents in the next 30 years, says Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford.

"We will have to develop and apply a whole range of new approaches in urban policy and urban technology," Basford told the Commonwealth Association of Architects conference.

This included new methods of housing design, new low energy urban systems and improved waste-water recycling, better transportation systems and improved municipal organization.

But the problem of Canada and the developed world pale beside those of the developing countries, whose urban populations are profected to quadruple to 1.5 billion from 271 million by the year 2000, Basford said.

They Bite Off—We Swallow

Assessment of the legislative session which was prorogued yesterday ranges from Premier Barret's "very, very productive" to the two opposition leaders' agreement that it was largely a waste of time. Somewhere in between lies the real judgment of a session that produced, among other things, a quite revolutionary labor code, a Farm Income Assurance Act to level out good years and bad years for farmers; new provision for farm loans and encouragement for secondary agricultural enterprises, and other legislation.

The Petroleum Corporation Act puts the government into the petroleum industry by means of a Crown corporation empowered to develop, produce and market both natural gas and petroleum. Of a similar sweeping nature is the act which sets up the new Transportation and Communications Department, giving the minister broad powers to regulate in these areas.

The disturbing nature of the NDP government's continuing march into socialistic policies lies in such legislation as the last two mentioned. It is a familiar explanation by governments in British Columbia that the dictatorial powers given to an administration by legislation will, of course, never be used. We heard this refrain under Mr. Bennett and Mr. Bonner in past years. Now we are hearing it from Premier Barrett, Mr. Strachan and other cabinet ministers.

Such legislation is exceedingly dangerous, both to the public which at any time may find itself under strict controls, and to the concept of democratic governance which calls only for legislation which is needed and which will be put into use. The sword-of-Damocles type of law-making is law by implied threat, no matter which political party introduces it, and hence poor law.

Broadly interpreted, as it is quite possible to do, the petroleum act could give the government almost absolute possession of the oil and gas industry. At this point in the development of the industry, it is clear that either federal or provincial controls — or both — will be necessary to cope with the growing problem of world shortage, rising prices, international corporations, foreign commitments and other difficulties. But ownership by government could burden public funds with the responsibility, for instance, of providing high-risk capital for exploration and development. That should be neither necessary nor wise.

The new legislation that gives B.C.'s government the power to influence and control communications of all kinds is a long step onto very delicate ground. For one thing, it opens up the question of governmental interference in the free of flow of news, through publication or electronic delivery. Over the years Canada has seen ill-fated efforts by one or two governments — such as the Alberta Social Credit administration — to try to exercise control of the press. The world is well aware of the results when government intervenes in the free provision of information for the public: control is the first resort of a government which fears the people.

Controls such as in Chile, or Russia, or Uganda may be farthest from the minds of the NDP cabinet in British Columbia. If so, any legislation in the communications field should have been phrased clearly to exclude any such interference and ensure safeguards — not so worded as to leave wide open the possibility of ill-advised intervention.

Or Else!

The abject response of Japan and the nine European Common Market nations to Arab demands for their support against Israel or their oil shipments would be cut, is logical, expectable and rational—and reads like the account of an airliner hijacking.

This type of economic strong-arming is not new, but it has seldom been exerted through so essential a commodity as oil. In earlier times, the response to such an ultimatum might well have been war. In the present age, such a conflict would be very difficult to keep localized, particularly with a giant such as Russia standing in the wings.

But it is clear that this tactic, if successful, will be repeated—just as hijackings have fed on precedent. We might be getting into an era of strategic deprivations, whereby political or military requests would get favorable answers by reason of threatened trade restrictions. If the camel's nose is now in the tent, what may we expect tomorrow?

Surely one result will be a drastic speed-up of measures by the affected countries to prepare alternative sources of energy and so ensure that their national policies, particularly in regard to foreign affairs, will not again be held to ransom.

". . . great, Honey, just great . . . I'm getting it all . . . keep on struggling, that's it . . . face the camera . . . BEAUTIFUL . . . !"

BRUCE HUTCHISON

Sunset on the White House

WASHINGTON — In the mellow autumn dusk the White House turns golden, its columns aglow under the westering sun. A vast circle of yellow chrysanthemums, the year's last flowers, surrounds a gushing fountain. Two furious grey squirrels fight over a fallen nut on the lawn, watched by a fat old pigeon, some bored policemen in their sentry box and, through the iron fence, three bronzed hippie youths without shirts or shoes.

No one else pauses along the street to observe a scene of brooding peace, only the mysterious captive who, yesterday, was the nation's unchallenged master, the world's most powerful man. And on the morrow comes the avalanche, the resignations, the missing electronic tapes, military alerts, nuclear threats and other things quite unimaginable.

In this maelstrom of crisis piled on crisis the foreigner recalls Emerson's dictum that, even in his homely time, events were in the saddle and rode mankind. President Nixon, a creature unique and literally sui generis in his mind and his desperation, is trying, and failing, to mount the saddle, and everyone seems to agree that he himself has become the supreme issue before a great and bewildered people. Still, the foreigner, lagging behind events, may doubt the logic, or cliche, or current politics as too pat, too narrow and too brief.

Mighty Myth

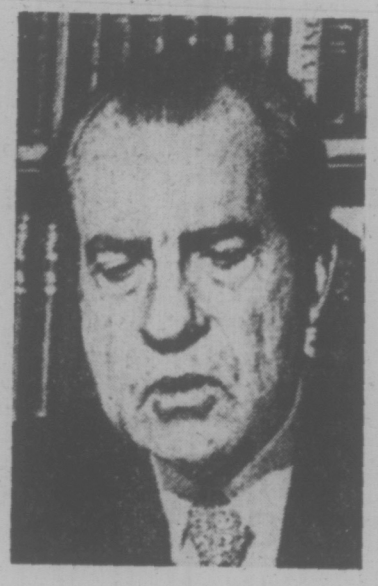
For if he goes, now or later, Nixon must soon belong to the ages, in a special niche reserved for history's more egregious eccentrics. A mighty myth of some sort is in the making. But the nation, and the truly supreme issue, will remain when he is gone.

The issue, as the foreigner may guess, is whether the nation itself, its governing system, its constitution, its tortured society and lavish lifeways, can survive strains much more onerous, and dangerous, than the tragedy of one man—dangerous not merely to one nation but to humanity entire which, with all its fears and all the hopes of future years, is hanging breathless on that nation's fate.

Far beyond Washington, Watergate, the ruined president and the poisonous scandals, far across a continental state of mixed success and failure, the foreigner might observe the question, blackly silhouetted, as it were, against the autumn sunset. He might also remember that, a year ago, after Mr. Nixon's electoral triumph, his advisers confidently predicted that all the nation's problems would be solved by a regime of courage, law and order.

Lincoln asked the same question, of course, at Gettysburg, but the answer was easier then because, though stark and terrible in a war between brothers, it was at bottom simple—whether the union, or any union of free men, could govern itself and long endure.

All men understood such a question



PRESIDENT NIXON

under a president whom all men could trust, but today, under a president whom most men distrust, the American dilemma is too complex for any man to understand. Certainly it is not, as foreigners usually assume, the sole human dilemma of Mr. Nixon, the political dilemma of his recovery or destruction, or even the constitutional dilemma of a governing aparatus stretched to breaking point.

Nor, in fundamentals, is it a sudden, unnatural dilemma, a mere chain of accidents, blunders and crimes. They are all part of it, the visible, ugly part, but not the whole. What we witness here is the bitter harvest, the long accumulation and collision of forces unseen and unsuspected over over half a century at least.

If men could grasp its ultimate contours, as they do not grasp them yet, this is not only the greatest turning point since the Civil War — an obvious fact — but a blinding moment of truth, in myriad aspects, that was long coming and now, for the first time, cannot be evaded.

In short, Watergate, the president, the dirty tricks, the economic derangement, the foreign policy of fragile detente and the rest are the immediate, haphazard tokens or symbols of something infinitely large, more inscrutable and, at the moment, impossible for any mind to grasp.

So, meditating in his ignorance, hope and fear, the foreign reporter turned away from the autumn-gilded White House to ask himself how such a story should be written, if it could ever be written at all; and also whether anything written today would be valid tomorrow in the avalanche where anything, yes anything, may happen.

Grand Question

But as these reports will try to argue, the grand question has been answered in its essentials already. The republic stands and will stand, despite the storm beating on its ramparts. The society will change drastically and painfully but it will not fall apart. The American dream is rusted and ruptured but it will return in different form, stronger, perhaps, for its cleansing.

While he had the luck in the following dreadful days to meet some of the leading figures in a drama now approaching denouement, the reporter received more wisdom from a black cook in the kitchen of a certain house out past the lights of Washington.

This black woman, serene in her brutal heritage, had driven to work in a huge and costly automobile (itself a vivid symbol) and now, over a cup of coffee, she declared her faith with quiet, unconscious authority.

"Trouble," she said, out of her own harsh life experience, "is bad but it brings a family together. You'll see, it's goin' to bring us all together again, like a family. Just you watch." And then, with a meaning greater than she knew, the granddaughter of a slave added, almost in tears: "Oh God, how I love this dear old country!"

That, it seemed to me, was a good place to begin my inquiries. They led to some improbable men, places and conclusions.

Legalities of Anti-Pollution

TORONTO — The Ontario government's first attempt to close down an industrial plant because of air pollution has failed abysmally.

The Environmental Protection Act, billed by the government as an "environmental bill of rights" and the most advanced legislation to be found anywhere when it was passed two years ago, has been found to be full of legal holes.

And the bureaucratic machinery for enforcing anti-pollution standards has been revealed to be unco-ordinated, confused and in certain respects, virtually impotent.

This fiasco began in the late hours of Oct. 25 when Dr. G. W. Moss, the Toronto Medical Officer of Health, was telephoned by the Environmental Science Associates Laboratory of Burlington, Massachusetts. The city health department had, nine days before, taken blood samples from 725 residential neighbors of Canada Metal Co. Ltd., a lead smelting plant on Toronto's Eastern Ave., and sent them off for analysis as to lead content. The laboratory was calling to say that unusually high readings were being obtained and, in particular, three residents should have immediate medical treatment.

When this information was relayed to the Ministry of the Environment the following morning, the director of the Air Management Branch, with the approval of the minister, James Auld, issued a "stop order" against Canada Metal and an associated company, the effect of which was to close the plant down and put its 200 employees out of work.

Order Quashed

The company, however, immediately ran to the Supreme Court of Ontario with a motion to quash the stop order. Mr. Justice D. A. Keith granted the motion on the ground that the government had produced no evidence to show the plant was the cause of the lead poisoning and he could hardly draw such an inference when it appeared, from the evidence, that of 725 persons tested, three had high levels and 722 did not.

Ironically, this rather misrepresents the facts. Although all the results have yet to be published, it is clear that considerably more than three persons had high readings. But the Air Management Branch was either aware of only three cases, or it thought three was enough at the time it had to appear in court. However, there will be no appeal of Justice Keith's decision because the government's basic problem is to prove that the lead poisoning, however extensive, is caused by emissions from the Canada Metal plant.

This is one of those situations where the relationship may be obvious to the layman but proving it legally and scientifically is another thing. The Air Management Branch has been monitoring the air around this plant for some time and it has always found the amount of lead in the air to be below the criteria for ambient air quality (15 micrograms of lead per cubic metre of air on the average over a 24-hour period, and 10 micrograms on the average over a 30-day period).

However, the lead emissions from the company's chimney stack have been above the permissible standard. The result is a mystery: the stack emissions should produce higher lead readings in the neighborhood air than in fact have been recorded. A possible explanation is that the air currents are such that the stack emissions are being concentrated in areas which the monitoring has not yet discovered.

One way of determining this would be to do blood tests on all or most of the residents to see if any relationship emerges as between the company stack and where the "high readings" live. But the provincial government has no jurisdiction to do this; that is the city health department's function and until October, it was never done, even though the plant has been a problem for years. Now that it has been done, the correlation can be made, providing the Air Management Branch gets the necessary information: being a "health" problem, the doctors are reluctant to disclose the tests by patient name and address.

Even if a relationship can be shown, however, there remains the problem of conflicting medical opinion on how lead posioning is caused. Some experts argue for inhalation, others for ingestion. If the latter, the danger is obviously to small children playing in surroundings where a lead cover (lead is inert on the ground) has built up into dangerous concentrations over the years. That, however, is hardly an argument for closing down a plant if its pollution is now under control; it is, rather, an argument for replacing all the earth in the neighborhood and removing all the dust from the buildings.

The city of Toronto has its own solution: it wants the province to help pay to have the plant relocated. This may not be very realistic, but it has not stopped city council from stalling on necessary approvals of another chimney stack and other pollution control equipment which the company must install to meet the control program imposed on it by the Air Management Branch last March. It is now clear the time-tables of this program will not be met but the province will not be able to prosecute because the company has not been able to get a building permit from the city.

Curious Aspect

Perhaps the most curious aspect of all, however, is the zealous misuse of the "stop order" by the Air Management Branch. This power has been commonly referred to as a "stop work" order but the phrase is a misnomer. The Environmental Protection Act is very carefully worded in this respect and what is obviously intended is that the pollution be stopped, not that the entire plant be closed down.

In the Canada Metal case, it can be argued that it amounts to the same thing but the point is that the Air Management Branch, in taking the view that it did, has forced the government into a policy it never intended to be in, and raised all sorts of intriguing problems as well.

If, for example, industrial polluters are to be closed down, what obligations do companies have to pay their employees severance allowance? If none (and the Employment Standards Act is certainly mute on the point now), should not the government require that a company's pollution control program be a subject for collective bargaining, so that workers have some say in its effectiveness?

The government now has the entire problem under "review" and a "working group" of health officials, engineers, lawyers and scientists is charging about to find the answers. Which is to say, back to the old drawing board.

Editorial Correspondence

Sea Cadets

I would like to tell you a very heart-warming story about one of our sons. This boy was born with cystic fibrosis, one of the deadliest of killers of children and young adults. The first years of his life were spent almost entirely in hospital, and, as we lived in an area of very harsh winters, schooling, as he got older was almost out of the question except for correspondence and special hospital schools.

Five years ago on the advice of one of B.C.'s leading pediatricians, we moved to the Island. (We also have another son afflicted in the same manner.) From the time of our arrival he steadily improved healthwise to the point where he joined the Rainbow Sea Cadets, at first as a bandsman, as he was still not able to cope with all phases of the more strenuous training program.

The officers, members, doctors, etc. both affiliated with the Navy and the Sea Cadet movement, have poured into this boy all their knowledge, interest and help both physically and mentally to the point where he felt that this was the career he wished to follow. This itself seemed an impossible situation but with so much co-operation from all sources he is now on board HMCS Chaudiere for a winter of training preparatory to being able to pursue this venture, possibly through one of the military colleges.

The point I would like to make is that this is only one boy, possibly amongst many hundreds over the years, who have been helped, not only towards a better chance in life and the business world, but also to possibly one of the finest careers available, that of serving his country.

Aside from the assistance to the boys themselves, there are many, many men both in the permanent service and in the reserves, who give up many hours of their personal free time each week to carry on this very worthwhile cause.

The Sea Cadet movement is facing a grave situation in that this is not a movement supported by the government or the Navy, but must be entirely self supporting. I do not know whether you are aware that Rainbow Sea Cadet Division of Victoria is the oldest established division in Canada, but unless something drastic is done to help with further funds it is threatened with permanent closure at the end of the current year. This would be an appalling thing to have happen especially in these times when it is so easy for youth to get on the wrong trail.

Would it not be possible for the government to give a hand? They have subsidized so many youth activities to date —and this I personally feel is one of the greatest of the youth causes. — (Mrs.) J. McLaughlin, 10204 Almond St., Sidney, B.C.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of November 8, 1913

That the coal situation in British Columbia was going to get very much worse before it got better was the prediction made last night by Parker Williams, MPP, in a speech delivered in the Dominion Theatre, in which he raked the McBride government fore and aft, for its policy of handing over resources of the province to the monopolists. He explained the situation in the coal mines of Vancouver Island, pointing out that nine months ago 1,500 miners at Ladysmith and Cumberland got into a tangle with the company over working conditions and when the company refused to talk business, the 1,500 men took the only remedy in their hands — they stopped work.

'Comet' Across Education Leaves a Wispy Trail

By BRIAN JACKSON
New Statesman

"Call me Iva-a-n." Five long spreadeagled fingers thrust between me and my next forkful of spaghetti. I jerked up to see a bony, smiling cut-out from an El Greco painting. It was Ivan Illich — "High Priest of DeSchoolers" said the picture posters all around Melbourne.

A few weeks earlier, writing quietly at the Black Bull, I'd picked up the phone and was surprised to hear that the British Council had agreed to provide me with a very generous open air ticket to Australia. "But I'm not going to Australia . . ." Oh yes I was, apparently. Hadn't I accepted the invitation? "What invitation?" I ventured. Then days later it came. A brief awkwardly typed note from the Australian Union of Students. Australia was in a very bad way, they said. It was hopeless chipping away at the teachers' unions, the education authorities, the politicians. Students planned a gigantic conference, an appeal to the country over the heads of the professionals. And they wanted Ivan Illich and myself to do this.

So there I was, mind full of De-Schooling and the Celebration of Awareness, belly hungry for spaghetti. And this El Greco bishop, surrounded by lovely girls, apparently telling me about his new book. "You speak, I think — forgive me — of the classification of children, Professor Jackson. You remember — pardon me if I mention it — the classification of animals in the Chinese encyclopaedia?"

Clearly I was expected to remember no such thing. Though the lovely girls smiled at me, awaiting the brilliant European apercu!

"So you recall, Dr. Jackson — allow me, if I may, to list them — the categories there: one, those belonging to the Emperor; two, those that are embalmed; three, suckling pigs; four, those that are fabulous; five, stray dogs; six, those drawn with a camelhair brush."

"Well, I don't know if . . ."

But the indifferent cataract washed along. Ten seconds too late I suddenly remembered reading about that Chinese classification — didn't the Cambridge Review once quote it from Foucault or Borges? But surely, I thought, it was a fantasy, an imaginary, debunking classification? Such was the magnetism of the man though, that I held my tongue, observed English courtesies and stuck to the spaghetti.

'Giant Classroom'

"The world—yes, the whole world" (he was now speaking to the riveted restaurant — via me) "is about to be — is about to be — yes, the whole world is about to be — transformed. How can I say it? Yes, transformed — into a giant classroom which will really be an acute ward of a huge mental hospital." I stuck to my spaghetti.

Next the Grand Hall of the university. "Must be over a thousand in by now," said Andrew Bain, the student chairman. "Glad it's not me — would you like a glass of water?" I'd have preferred a pint of Tetley's but at least the job was straightforward. I argued for starting education at birth; root it in mother, child, father, family. For using "school" as a reflective, analytical base — but for spending much more time than we do releasing the energies and knowledge locked up in our community. For the comprehensive university of course, and for the imaginative use (following up Sesame Street and the Open University) of the media. Not the kind of program we could pull off tomorrow. But — after we sense the necessary limitations of nursery schools for all and comprehensive schools for all — the program we might go for the day after tomorrow.

I was puzzled as to how Ivan Illich would follow up. I was puzzled from the very beginning when I saw him on television explaining that he never gave television interviews. Puzzled again at his airport interviews when he argued that no one needed to travel faster than five miles an hour. My belly said yes to both. Yet each time, there was the camera, the jumbo in the background, the clear need, surely, to carry a message across continents.

Illich followed me on to the platform, took off his jacket, rolled up his sleeves as if he were going to shift all the chairs, in one long night of manual labor, complained entertainingly of the heat from the TV cameras, then hassled the crew without mercy — smilingly telling a thousand people that it was impossible to talk to a thousand people. "I don't expect you expected a man — like me with spectacles. I wish I could really meet and talk to each of you this evening. But — even though I am completely exonerated from the responsibility of doing it that way, I will talk to all of you."

He did nothing of the sort. There was not a hiccup, a cough, a chair scraping. The man on stage had a hypnotic magic. You watched his baffling mobile face, moving eyes, reaching hands exactly as Frankie Howerd makes you watch his. There was a perfunctory lecture-like run-in. 'The variety of major institutions are entering more than simultaneously into a crisis.' The lovely plump girl from Perth next to me borrowed my pen and wrote it down, word for word. As she captured it I noticed, inked in on her left thigh, below her short purple skirt, the distracting message "Dave was here."

Perhaps that broke the spell. For tuning in to Illich again, I find he has abandoned any attempt at statement. Instead he is coaxing members of the audience to come down the aisle, up to the platform, then to a separate microphone by the cameras.

"Now there is you and me. Ask me your question. Forget these people. Forget all this. Ask."

Girls rise from their seats, come up and are hard to shoo away even after asking a dozen questions. One says: "Shall I have children, Dr. Illich?" Illich spreads his arms. "My child. I can only answer for me. You must answer for you. If you give your flesh to the world, you are bound to the world — you can no longer think freely."

'Disaster Coming'

Suddenly I am alert. And antagonised. For the first time, not puzzled — but on guard. Surely we are all bound to each other "through the flesh" as the prelates put it. Our loves, our kids. That is the world.

Others say: "Tell us what to do." Illich is on home ground. "Wait," he says, "and think. Do not commit your flesh, do not have children. Wait for the inevitable critical disaster converging on the institutions of the world. Then — not a new political party, but something like — the ones who have truly thought will know how to make the world again."

Perhaps I was naive. But I had not expected this extraordinary Billy Graham approach to education. Ivan Illich was the gifted child of a Croatian Catholic father and a Shephardic-Jewish mother. He took his doctorate at Vienna on Arnold Toynbee's world vision of history, civilisation and Christianity. And then became the prodigy of the Roman Catholic priesthood — youngest ever monsignor in New York at 29, and then Catholic vice-chancellor of the University of Puerto Rico. He and the Catholic Church quarrelled, and he was driven from Puerto Rico to build his own organisation (CIDOC) in Mexico. And next on to education and de-schooling.

Yet was this a travelling showman, dealing in attractable emotions? Or was it a brave, individual voyage — a search not only for questions but for answers too? I wish I knew. Nothing I saw in the flesh made me believe in the depth of Illich's position. Indeed it helped me to be more honest with myself about the thinness of the books, the sense of excited reading followed by nothing in your hand.

I would not, after working with him, take him as a fixed star. He was the escaped monk-priest who always roams the world at times of crisis, preaching abstinence, voluntary poverty and the day of gloom. Only this time education had usurped religion.

And yet — the paradoxes of the man are infinite — without his comet path across education, would we really be asking fundamental questions at all?

The Emphasis Is on the News

By MARK HARRISON
The Toronto Star

The president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, Keith Rapsey, called the other day to criticize a Star story he considered unfair.

It was a report of a Toronto speech by Arthur Smith, a former chairman of the Economic Council of Canada, about the performance of the Canadian economy.

The headline, and the emphasis in the report, were on Smith's assertion that the benefits of Canadian economic growth this year had gone largely to corporations, landlords and government.

Very little of the growth in income, Smith observed, had flowed to wage and salary earners.

Rapsey's complaint was that these statements were buried in a single paragraph on page 8 of Smith's 11-page speech.

He felt it was unfair for The Star to lift this paragraph out of its obscure position and elevate it to the most important part of the news report.

The Star was distorting the news, he felt, because Smith himself had not placed such emphasis on this point and had devoted only a brief part of his speech to it.

The Rapsey complaint is a common one. There is a widespread notion that a news report of a speech, to be fair and accurate should reflect the same emphasis that the speaker himself conveys.

Similarly, many readers believe that opinions expressed at public meetings should be reflected in news stories in direct proportion to the amount of time spent on those opinions at the meetings.

A letter in today's Star, for example, criticizes a news report of a public meeting because "90 per cent of the article dealt with only perhaps 10 per cent of the meeting."

The letter added: "I realize that an article such as this cannot communicate everything that was said by everyone. I do feel, however, that it should represent the views expressed in the proper proportion so as to convey an accurate picture of what transpired."

Such views strike me as wholly unrealistic. The public would be served poorly if it had to rely on news reports of speeches and public meetings in which the emphasis was the same as that of the speakers.

Consider an obvious example. On March 31, 1968, U.S. president Lyndon Johnson delivered an address to the U.S. people about U.S. policy in Vietnam.

His speech was 11 pages long, running to about 3,000 words. The second last paragraph of his speech contained, without any prior warning, the following 21 words:

"Accordingly, I shall not seek and I will not accept the nomination of my party for another term as your president."

Those 21 words, so obscurely positioned in his text, electrified the nation, of course, and made headlines around the world. Does anyone remember the rest of his speech? Not likely.

Would anyone seriously suggest that news reports of that speech should have treated LBJ's announcement with the same emphasis — or lack of emphasis — as he had?

The emphasis in a news story must be on what is important, significant, or of widespread public interest in a speech. And this does not always — or even usually — coincide with the emphasis the speaker himself places in his speech.

Similarly, anyone who has sat in the public galleries of the House of Commons and endured a tedious and repetitious debate on, say, Crow's Nest Pass freight rates, would be horrified at the notion that his newspaper should report the speeches in direct proportion to the time spent in uttering them.

A newspaper has a responsibility, of course, to report accurately all points of view on an issue. But it must place the emphasis on what is important or significant.

In covering meetings, it has a responsibility to report the divergent views expressed, but also to emphasize the most significant views even though these may have taken up only a few minutes of the meeting.

To do otherwise — to merely parrot the views of every speaker—would be to waste an enormous amount of news space, waste the time of readers, and encourage charlatans, press agents and publicity seekers.

Room for Tories Now in Quebec

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — The full implications for Ottawa of the Bourassa landslide, are largely obscure, beyond an initial, immense satisfaction in all federal parties that Quebec has voted so strongly for federalism.

Beneath this satisfaction is a view, expressed by Heward Grafftey, one of the two Conservative MPs from Quebec, that it may be necessary for the Progressive Conservative party to now enter Quebec provincial politics.

Grafftey pointed out that the Parti Quebecois is the official opposition in Quebec for the next four years. It has obtained clear second ranking in the popular vote. Weak as it may seem in seats, the PQ is now the only alternative to the Quebec Liberals. Ultimately, it will move up and into power unless Quebec voters are given immediately another strong, federalist choice in parties.

What Grafftey is reflecting upon is the enormous polarization which took place in this election. Despite the general rejection of the PQ and separatism, it survives in the assembly and it got many more votes than in 1970.

Bourassa has never made much impact on the Ottawa establishment either as a personality or as a political thinker. This should change.

The mantle of such a grand victory will be useful to the premier in his dealings with the federal government, from constitutional issues to tough practical matters such as tax sharing, and corporate incentives.

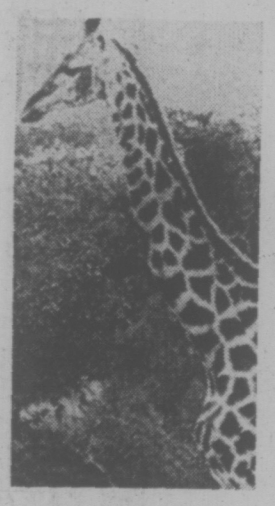
A federal minister from Quebec who does not want to be indentified told me he feared there will be a deep sense of outrage in Quebec which will win sympathy because the PQ got so few seats in relation to its share of the votes.

"That is," he said, "below the sweep, there remain many contentious issues in Quebec provincial politics which will soon emerge as critical for the Bourassa government.

"For example, the language issue in education, the inadequacy of health services and the divisions over trade unionism. These will cap a potential in frustration simply because a capable oppositon to vent such issues has been denied by the disproportion of Liberal seats."

The minister went on to say the PQ will be able to make much of the enormous sweep of the English voters into the Bourassa camp and the next few years will be filled with arguments as to whether the PQ has 40 to 45 per cent of the genuine French-Canadian sentiment.

In terms of any federal election in the next year, the results are most heartening to the Trudeau government. This is simply because the provincial and federal Liberal parties are largely identical at the riding level and each raises most of its money from the same corporate sources.



Calling Dr. Doolittle

GIRAFFE HI-JACK

Manchester Guardian

A giraffe which has fallen down finds it exceptionally difficult to stand up again. This is what anyone who has seen a giraffe would expect. But Dr. V. A. Langman of the University of Pretoria has examined the giraffe's problems more deeply and has found them to be serious indeed. A giraffe which has fallen over sideways risks hypotension, hypothermia, and cardiac failure if it tries to regain its feet. Only if it sits down on its bottom—in what Dr. Langman calls "a position of sternal recumbency" — can it safely try to stand up unaided.

For giraffes the problem is vital. For those who want to capture giraffes it is serious.

Fortunately for giraffe-hunters (and giraffes) the Mammal Research Institute of the University of Pretoria has been doing some original work in this field. A team of eight researchers, equipped with ropes, drugs, darts and guns, set out to capture specimens from a herd of giraffe in order to mark them for a Giraffe Population Survey. Out of 21 temporarily captive giraffes only two succumbed.

In a limited way this is good news for giraffes. If giraffe-hunters capture one they are less likely to kill one in the process. At the same time it would seem only fair that the fruits of the institute's research should be available to both sides, as it were. If Dr. Doolittle were alive his parrot would even now be translating Dr. Langman's paper into language that giraffes could understand. It is not every giraffe, after all, that actually wants to be captured — "successfully" as Dr. Langman puts it — or otherwise.

Japan Fuels Oil Race

By ROBERT WHYMANT

TOKYO — Whatever else emerges from the Middle East war, one effect will have been to heighten existing mistrust between Western nations and Japan in the vital area of procuring oil.

As the biggest oil importer in the world, Japan stands to suffer more than any other nation from a prolonged curtailment of Arab oil supplies. Japan imports 86 per cent of her oil from the Middle East, nearly three quarters through the international concerns affected by the Arab embargo.

Japan is dependent on petroleum for 7.3 per cent of her primary energy requirements. (Britain, with more natural gas, nuclear energy, and coal for about 40 per cent.)

Disturbed by this dependency, and by the much-discussed prospect of an impending world energy crisis, Nakasone Yasuhiro, Japan's chauvinistic Minister of International Trade and Industry, began a vigorous courtship of oil-supplying nations earlier this year that aroused suspicions among other oil consumers that Japan was out to corner the market by extravagant bidding.

It was in the Middle East this May that Nakasone trod most heavily on the toes of Western oil-consumers. The minister, whose controversial remarks sometimes make Foreign Ministry officials wince, described an American-proposed consortium for co-operation among oil consuming nations as a "Zionist conspiracy" and made pointed remarks about Japan having "clean hands" in the Middle East.

He promised large-scale economic and technological assistance to Iran and three Arab oil-producing nations which he visited on his trip. The Arabs were impressed. Saudi Arabia agreed to supply 200 million barrels of crude oil; included in the deal were an assembly plant for lorries and an integrated steel mill to be built by Japanese companies.

Kuwait and Abu Dhabi are also receiving large-scale economic aid from Tokyo.

A direct oil deal which antagonised Western nations more strongly was one concluded with Iraq in September. A group of four Japanese firms signed an agreement for 100 million tons of crude oil over 10 years and 30 million tons of liquified petroleum gas over 15 years. In return, Japan agreed to supply a loan of $500 millions.

Japanese oil companies, with the encouragement of Miti, had stepped in to provide Iraq with badly needed financial and technological assistance denied her by the major concerns. Japan was accused of practising "destructive competition" in her quest for privileged access to oil sources.

In early October, the largest international oil company, Exxon, felt it necessary to threaten Japanese oil firms with legal proceedings if they arranged direct purchases from the Libyan government after the nationalisation of Western oil assets.

It was perhaps not surprising, therefore, that the present Middle East crisis should give rise to fears that Japan might try to take advantage of the Arab countries' feud with America to conclude more such direct deals.

As Dead as a Grocery Budget

By GARY LAUTENS

Another time-honored custom has bitten the dust at our place.

The grocery allowance.

Through 16 years of marriage, we've always budgeted a certain amount every week for groceries.

Lately, it's been $55.

So yesterday, I came home and plopped $55 on the kitchen table.

"What's this for?" my wife asked.

"Groceries," I replied. "For the week."

"You've got to be kidding," was the retort. "The only way $55 will feed this family for a week is if three of us take up malnutrition as a hobby."

"But $55 fed us last week."

"Sure, because we ate out twice, I wrote a cheque for the milkman, and Richard had the flu.

"Oh, yes, and I also sent you to the store for a few things and never paid you back."

"I thought it was just an oversight," I confessed.

"Not at all. You may have noticed I never answer the door any more either. It may be the paperboy, a COD order, a canvasser, or somebody selling Girl Guide cookies.

"If you go, it comes out of your money, not mine."

"Do you mean you've been playing tricks on me?"

"Of course. It's the only way I've been able to get along on my household budget.

"By the way, you've got a button missing on the pocket where you carry your wallet. You'd better get it fixed before somebody steals it, a stranger, I mean."

"If $55 won't cover our food costs, how much will we need?" I asked.

"Who knows? A person has no idea until he or she gets to the supermarket and sees the latest prices.

"I'd buy cheaper cuts of meat, but they don't sell beef gall stones, tonsils or adenoids—not yet.

"It might be better if we just forget about a hard-and-fast figure. I'll spend what I have to, and not a penny more."

"Okay," I grumbled. "I guess that's best."

"By the way," my wife inquired, "now that I've made my little confession, how are you doing on your budget?"

"Do you think it's going to rain?" I replied.

"I thought so," she said.

Fugitives Doze Off, Captured

WADENA (UPI) — Two fugitives who were holding members of a farm family hostage in hopes of exchanging them for an airplane ride to freedom fell asleep early today, allowing their hostages to escape and police to arrest them.

An Ottertail County sheriff's deputy said the fugitives, John Morgan, 37, and William Winans, 18, dozed off about 4:30 a.m. and three members of the Elmer Wegscheid family made a run for safety.

The deputy, who would not allow newsmen to enter the farmyard, said the fugitives were arrested shortly after.

Morgan and Winans, who shot their way out of jail Monday night, took Mr. and Mrs. Wegscheid and their four children hostage Tuesday night.

However, after bargaining with police for an airplane and supplies, a heavy snowstorm Wednesday morning upset their plans for escape.

The two jail breakers, described by Wegscheid as "gentlemen" and "well-mannered," released three of the Wegscheid children Wednesday after meeting with law enforcement officers and Minneapolis Tribune reporter Harley Sorensen.

Authorities had agreed to meet the fugitives' demands for an airplane, two parachutes, two tents, two football helmets and first aid equipment, and even brought a second Cessna 182 to the nearby Wadena airport early today for the two to use for a getaway.

The FBI and local authorities had scheduled another negotioting session for 9 a.m. today at which time the fugitives had promised to reveal whether they would take the airplane or give themselves up.

Throughout the ordeal, the two fugitives often spoke with newsmen by telephone.

During a telephone interview with United Press International late Wednesday night, Morgan said, "There's a possibility, however slight, that we might consider surrendering if we can work out acceptable terms, but as of now, we still plan on flying out."

He also admitted, "this type of ordeal should not happen to anybody, especially people like this (Wegscheids). I've the most respect for them. They're brave people. It's unfortunate."

When Morgan and Winans shot their way out of the Wadena county jail Monday they wounded jailer Randy Hanson.

Before taking the Wegscheids hostage, they holed up briefly at another farmhouse.

B.C. Tops All

British Columbia topped all Canada in the growth rate of manufacturing during the first seven months of 1973.

Figures collected by provincial trade departments show manufacturing shipments during the seven months to be worth $3.4 billion in B.C., up 29.4 per cent above the corresponding 1972 period.

This compares with a national average growth rate of 17.8 per cent.

Second in percentage growth is Newfoundland with shipments worth $201 million, up 24.7 per cent and third is Manitoba at $1 billion, up 22.2 per cent.

Quebec had the lowest percentage increase with shipments worth $9.4 billion, up 13.8 per cent.

Ontario was about the national average with a total of $19.5 billion, up 17.4 per cent over the corresponding period in 1972.

July was the latest month studied in the comparative table.

British Columbia's July shipments were worth $491.1 million, up 51.7 per cent over the previous July. Second highest percentage gain in the month was Saskatchewan with manufacturing shipments worth $71 million, up 31.8 per cent over a year ago.

Total manufacturing shipments in Canada during the first seven months was $36.7 billion, up 17.8 per cent.

Fund Drive For Autistic Children

The Victoria Society for Autistic Children launched a campaign today to raise $10,000, the local share of the $85,000 capital cost of creating a group home for teen-aged autistic children.

The society has taken an option on a house at 1425 Richardson for the home, society president Charles Moore said at a press conference today.

The group home which will accommodate six full-time residents and three occasional visitors is to provide care for children who have completed training in special classes for autistic children, such as those offered by the school board at Sir James Douglas School.

The house will be bought with a Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. mortgage and a grant from the provincial government.

The society is raising its initial $10,000 share through public subscriptions and is holding a tag day Dec. 1.

Dairy Disaster Facing Island: Farmer Claims

A Saanichton farmer challenged the provincial government Wednesday to find ways to raise farm incomes or face the death of the dairy industry on Vancouver Island.

Speaking at the annual meeting of the Vancouver Island Farmers' Institue in Duncan, Joseph Taylor of 1989 McIntyre, Central Saanich, said farmers are selling herds to slaughter houses because of the high costs of maintaining herds to milk supplying age.

The meeting was attended by two New Democratic MLAs, Donald Lewis and Gerry Anderson, both members of the house agriculture committee.

Taylor asked the two government members: "Do you realize how serious the situation is? ... In the dairy industry, cattle are going to slaughter. What must we do to present you with a case sufficient to get some government action?"

Lewis and Anderson later said they would bring the matter raised at the meeting to the government.

Taylor said today he was not necessarily asking for a government subsidy but "there are two things that can be done: one is a subsidy and the other is to put the price of milk up. I don't know which is the best way."

He charged that the recent federal-provincial milk subsidy plan has not helped the farmer. "Of the five cents per quart, four cents was given to the consumer and one cent was given to the processor. Yes, they were going to get their bit."

Taylor, who operates a 160-head family farm started by his father in 1948, gave his own case to prove dairy farmers have little option but to leave the business.

He said his gross revenue from shipments in October was $12,000. But out of this he had to pay $5,400 for grain and also hay.

From what was left, he had to pay wages to four men. Other costs coming out of the original $12,000 before there was anything left for his own family included utility bills and bank payments.

Taylor claimed many peopeople are selling younger cattle for slaughter, encouraged by higher beef prices and "sacrificing what would be their milk herd in three years or so."

Ten university presidents from the four western provinces will meet Nov. 16 for a one-day conference at the University of Victoria to form an information sharing orgamozatopm.

UVic president H. E. Farquhar said the group has met informally several times, but the upcoming meeting should set up a more formal structure to share educational information.

EXTRA DRIVERS

B.C. Hydro has hired 15 of the 28 additional bus drivers being sought for the Victoria transit system, local transportation manager David Suttie said Wednesday.

The hirings were ordered three weeks ago by Hydro management because of a labor shortage created by a shorter work week and the arrival of additional buses on the system.

Under the contract between Hyrdro and the Amalgamated Transit Union, bus drivers went from an eight-hour day to a seven-and-a-half -hour day Oct. 19.

Suttie said the new drivers are being hired in stages and take a three-week training course before being put on the job.

He said there has been no difficulty finding suitable drivers.

"As many (drivers) as they can get" are being sought for the Greater Vancouver transit system, Suttie said.

The hirings are for the period ending March 31, the end of Hydro's current fiscal year.

Listeners Stand For Van Cliburn

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

Van Cliburn for one half of the evening and Sibelius for the other.

That's the program for the current pair of Victoria Symphony concerts and the effect is almost overwhelming.

In fact when Cliburn played his two Debussy encores Wednesday — Clair de Lune and Reflets dans l'Eau — they were a marked contrast to the intensity of all that had preceded them.

The American virtuoso occupies the second half of the program with Rachmaninoff's highly pianistic but musically superficial Concerto No. 3 in D minor.

But the intensity that had been generated by Sibelius' Finlandia and Second Symphony in the first half, crowned by Cliburn's electrifying performance, brought 1,500 people in the Royal Theatre to their feet in a spontaneous and prolonged standing ovation.

With Laszlo Gati leading the orchestra in a particularly well handled accompanying role, Cliburn revealed the style and authority that has made his a legendary name among contemporary pianists.

His quiet, almost still presence at the piano is in itself, hypnotic. He plays entirely without histrionics even when he is invoking crescendoes of breath-taking power.

He commands an immense range of dynamics, producing pearling passages of brittle delicacy and clarity, but his tone remains on the cold side throughout.

The flawless technique is dazzling and the still boyish presence engaging. Nevertheless there are pianists on the world's concert stage whose style contains more of poetry and whose tone is more lambent — Canadian Ronald Turini is one who comes to mind. Still seldom does one hear such comprehensive keyboard mastery.

Maestro Gati opened the evening with the familiar Finlandia Op. 26, which interpretively was played with considerable fire and insight but technically left one with the feeling that the orchestra had not quite settled into it. There was no actual instance of insecurity from any section but rather an intimation that the grasp was not entirely firm.

The Symphony No. 2, however, came off remarkably well.

Teeming with original musical ideas, this fascinating work provides an almost surrealistic landscape of Sibelius' homeland.

The woodwinds must be truly grateful to a composer who has written such exquisite passages for them throughout; for instance the lovely opening of the second movement played against pizzicato cellos.

The intensity and drive, the splendor of dynamics with tympani and brass, the improved opulence of the string tone, sparked by Gati's obvious relish for this splendidly designed work, provided the greatest musical satisfaction of the evening.

There is a sold-out repeat performance of the concert tonight at 8:30.

VAN CLIBURN . . . a hypnotic presence

Gov't Mercy Flight

One of the B.C. government's new Cessna Citation jets was used early this morning on a mercy flight to take a young girl with a bleeding brain tumor from Castlegar to St. Paul's Hospital in Vancouver.

The six-seater jet, responding to a call from Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre, left Victoria at 5:40 a.m., stopped at Comox to get a nurse, and flew to Castlegar where it picked up 13-year-old Cynthia Messenger.

The girl's doctor radioed for help Wednesday night but because the community's airfield is for daytime use only the flight was delayed until this morning.

Normally military aircraft are used for mercy operations, but, in this case, the government plane "was here in Victoria and available," a spokesman at the Rescue Centre said.

The plane, one of two purchased two months ago, is attached to the aircraft division of the department of transport and communication and is used for government aerial photographic work and for transporting government personnel.

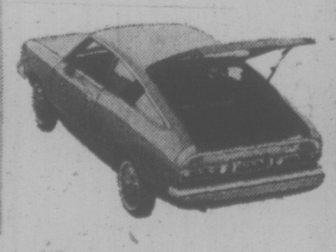
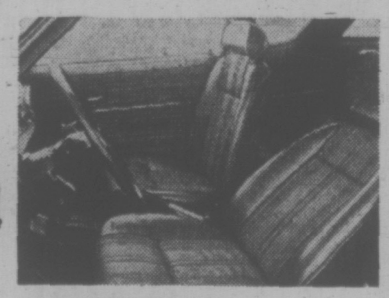
B210.

Datsun's new economy number.

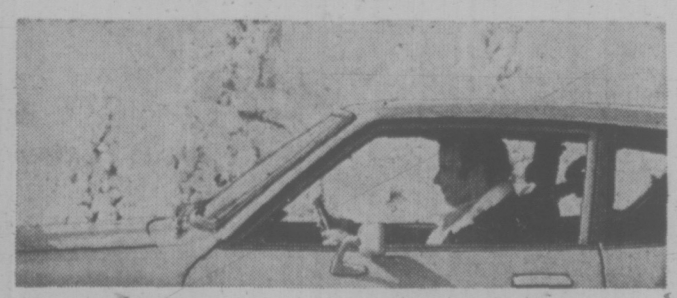
New Datsun economy:
The B210 is the least expensive Datsun. Its engine was designed by the same team that enabled Datsun to claim better gas mileage than any other car sold in the United States according to U.S. Government 1973 Environmental Protection Agency tests. Datsun saves.



New exterior look:
The least expensive Datsun line features the dazzling B210 Hatchback. It's a vest pocket 240Z with performance to match. Standard four-speed or optional automatic transmission.



New interior room:
Inside the B210, you'll find comfort and fun for four. With reclining seats and full instrumentation. The Hatchback has a cargo area as useful as that of a station wagon.



New winter protection:
What you need depends on where you live. Datsun B210 is designed for Canadian conditions with newly developed anti-corrosion measures, heavy duty electrical system and a powerful heater.

No-cost extras including:
• Reclining bucket seats
• Tinted glass all around
• Fold flat rear seat in Hatchback
• Flow-through ventilation system
• Full carpeting
• Whitewalls
• Rear window defroster
• Front disc brakes
• And many more

all you really need is a DATSUN

There are more than 1300 Datsun dealers in North America.

Stock Trader's Best Advice: Get In and GET OUT FAST

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

"You have a better chance of making money in the stock market if you don't hang on to your shares too long," says Richard Pomper of Vancouver.

He can be rated as a market expert because he makes at least $5,000 a year on his trading.

However, he has the added advantage of being a floor trader at the Vancouver Stock Exchange and is among the first to become aware of a price change in a stock.

Pomper at 29 is a veteran of six years as a floor trader in what is mainly a young man's game.

He works from 6:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. with seldom a break. Part of his job is to get orders on the phone from his office, Richardsn Securities of Canada Ltd. The rest of his job is to shout, shout, shout—trying to match up buy and sell orders with other floor traders.

"It is hard on the voice at first but you get used to it. Or you don't survive."

Pomper is actually doing three different jobs at once.

Primarily he is working for Richardson customers, executing their stock orders. Secondly, he trades for the Richardson account. Thirdly, and low priority according to the exchange rules, he is buying and selling for himself.

In the event that he, Richardson and a Richardson client are all bidding for a stock at the same price, by regulation the client order is processed first, then the house order and the personal order is last.

Despite the handicap, Pomper still manages to make money for himself most years as well as picking up his salary. Floor traders earn in the $12,000 to $15,000 range with top ones getting a bit more.

"I do a lot of trading for myself. I get in and I get out. I seldom hold a stock for more than a day or two. My limit is from 10 to 15 days."

He has to pay a commission to Richardson for each of his trades.

"I very seldom buy at the bottom and I never sell at the top. It is almost impossible to do that."

He admitted that a person jumping in and out would run up a large bill in commissins but argued that the chances of success were better than watching a stock go up and go down again without making a move.

"The people who lose out are those who become married to a stock. They watch it go from 25 cents to 50 cents but don't sell. They want to see it go to a dollar. Instead it goes back to 20 cents and they have lost out."

Pomper said it is easy for floor traders to make the mistake of hanging on too long as well.

He said he became a believer in one stock that cost him $5,000 before he finally took his loss.

"And a good thing, too. If I had stuck with it I would have lost $15,000."

Occasional big losses like that keep his yearly average gain at fairly modest levels.

Pomper said he probaly could make more money in other fields of the stock business but he was reluctant to leave the trading floor.

"I figure that you do a job until you get tired of it. I am not tired of this yet. It is still fascinating, almost an addiction."

It may be fun but it is far from easy.

He gets up at 5:30 a.m. and takes a trolley downtown from the south Granville area, leaving the car for his wife.

By 6:30 a.m. he is on the trading floor, posting bid-and-ask prices for overnight orders. The bell rings to start trading at 7 a.m. and the often frantic pace continues until it rings again at 2 p.m.

His first meal of the day may be after 3 p.m.

He will sip coffee as he works on the trading floor and if things are really slow he may slip out for a sandwich at noon.

"I don't get hungry in the morning. Besides, I am too busy to eat."

Although work started at 6:30 a.m., Pomper usually does not head for home before 4 p.m. After market closing at 2, he gets his firms in shape and then wanders over to the Richardson office to chat with the salesmen.

"That is an important part of the job. You get to know the people you deal with on the phone and you find out the latest mining reports — and of course the rumors."

Pomper said it will be a melancholy day for him if the trading floor closes and everything is handled by a giant computer.

Such a proposal is between five and 10 years away in Vancouver.

"From what I hear, the computer idea is so expensive that it will only come in soon if the market is good and it would be profitable. If the market is slow, it will take longer."

He would never wish a slow market on anybody but he was not eager for the computer to bring an end to the hectic fun of the trading floor.

Snow Lack Makes Profit Skid

VANCOUVER (CP)—Grouse Mountains Resorts Ltd. Wednesday reported a net loss for the fiscal year to May 31, 1973, of $83,259, or five cents a share.

In the previous year, Grouse reported a record profit of $383,056, or 25 cents a share.

John E. Hoegg, president, said in the annual report that the loss was entirely due to a bad ski season last winter. The resort was closed to skiing in Christmas week because of lack of snow.

Russian Timber Men Eyeing U.S.

B.C. INDUSTRY NERVOUS

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia's timber titans are concerned about a move by the forest industry in neighboring Washington State that could see Siberian timber move into the United States market.

Officials of the B.C. forest industry expressed surprise over reports that such plans have been discussed recently by a Washington mission in Moscow.

The mission of 25 state officials, businessmen and financial experts completed five days of talks in Moscow and disclosed plans to help development of the Soviet forest industry by furnishing capital machinery and knowledge in exchange for forest products.

Bert Cole, Washington commissioner of public lands, said deepsea ports in Washington are close to Siberia and equipped to handle ships of all sizes. He told a news conference Soviet forest products could be shipped to Washington for transhipment through the U.S.

Ian Barclay, president and chief executive officer of B.C. Forest Products, said Washington and Oregon are self-sufficient in forest products and are the two largest suppliers of timber to the growing Japanese market.

But if the move to bring in Siberian timber is successful, and depending on the volumes involved, it could become a matter of concern to B.C., since the U.S. is this province's largest export market for all forest products except plywood.

"If significant volumes of competitive quality and price are brought in, we've got to make damn sure we're competitive," Barclay said.

He said that for some time the Soviet Union has been the major timber supplier to Europe and the United Kingdom, and has to some extent altered the market picture for B.C. wood there.

Norman Dusting, executive vice-president of the B.C. Council of Forest Industries, said the lumber is a freely traded world commodity which flows from surplus to shortage areas. Thus, regardless of where timber from Siberia is sold, it would eventually have an impact on B.C. suppliers.

Dusting said Washington State's Moscow mission may have been involved with the state's powerful log export lobby, which has pressed for wide open export of unfinished logs to Japan.

U.S. lumber shortages have in the past applied pressure against such exports. Siberian lumber imports would ease the restrictions against such log exports, he said.

D. W. Timmis, president and chief executive officer of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., said "Russia hasn't buried us yet, but it does pose an interesting new source of competition."

Timmis said the Russians would be far wiser to ship their logs to Japan than the United States.

GUN-RUNNING DROPPED

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — District Judge Leo Brewster has dropped charges against Irish-Americans known as the Fort Worth Five.

The Five — Daniel Crawford, Paschal Morahan, Kenneth Tierney, Thomas Laffey and Mathias Reilly, all of New York — refused to testify before a grand jury investigating an alleged gun-running scheme for the Irish Republican Army.

The men remained jailed for 14 months near Dallas.

Greenpeace Freed, in Tahiti

OTTAWA (CP) — The external affairs department said Wednesday that the French government has agreed to return the Canadian ketch Greenpeace III which was seized by the French before a nuclear testing program on Mururoa Atoll in the South Pacific.

A department spokesman said the French agreed to return the ketch either at Mururoa Atoll or in Tahiti.

The Greenpeace, skippered by David McTaggart of Vancouver, was boarded and seized by the French navy last August.

The vessel was not damaged but McTaggart was beaten by the boarding party and suffered a serious eye injury.

During an Ottawa visit in September, McTaggart asked the Canadian government to seek a settlement from the French for the boarding and seizure of the ketch.

The external affairs spokesman said France had been asked to return the Greenpeace to Vancouver, a request apparently ignored by the French.

In Vancouver Wednesday night, McTaggart said the arrogance of the French government was hard to stomach.

He said that because of an eye injury inflicted by a French boarding crew when the Greenpeace crew was forcibly removed during the incident near Mururoa Aug. 15 he could not travel to either Mururoa or Tahiti to sail his boat home to Vancouver.

"The French government's arrogance is hard to stomach, let alone comprehend," the skipper said. "Last year they rammed us. This year they stole my boat, beat up the crew, stole equipment, and forcibly took crew and ship from international waters into French territory.

"They declared us undesirable, deported my crew and held me forcibly under guard in a military hospital, all the time declaring that the boarding party carried neither truncheons nor knives — that is, until the pictures were smuggled out showing armed sailors beating us.

"Since then, the French have said nothing until today. Now they said I can come and get my boat, now that they've finished testing.

It's Time to Curl —The Fink Method

Some notes from the hustings: Curlers, don't forget your stopwatch. No good curler should be without one. George Fink of Calgary carries his stop watch on a chain attached to his belt loop. He was noted timing a rock from hog line to hog line in the recent Evergreen tournament of champions. It must have worked, because he won. The explanation is that he can judge the ice by the speed of the rock, and he adjusts his draw weight accordingly. The sweeping, on his rink at least, was constant, and nearly always.

He didn't make it to this week's Playland Cash 'spiel because of a similar event in Alberta but he will be back in the province for the big $10,000 event in Prince George. It's getting so that soon a regular circuit will be set up, embracing both B.C. and Alberta cashspiels. As it is now, they clash. Glen Pierce will be one of the favorites here. He has only one change from last year's Consols crew. Des Deroche has retired, Ron Miki moving to lead with newcomer Brian Bettesworth at second and Bert Gretzinger as vice skip.

Des, however, couldn't stay away from watching his old skip in action and was explaining why he had retired. "At 48, the sweeping finally gets to you," he confided. "Not that I wasn't in shape—I was doing my two or three miles a day roadwork last year and still do; but in this type of competition, it just gets tougher. Besides, I'm travelling more in business." As for Pierce, six times a beaten Consols finalist, "I'm doing the circuit," he said.

Meanwhile, Duncan's Glen Harper was obviously back in form, witness his third-place finish in the Evergreen. His rink consisted of Bert Oud at lead, Ralph Fulford at second and Gwyn Hughes at third. This isn't his Consols rink, and the report is that he has a new third in Bill Gilchrist for the Consols. Gilchrist is an RCMP officer who previously played third for Rod Carmichael of Fernie. For the cash spiel, however, Gilchrist will line up, as will other members of the Carmichael rink with Ed Gee. Also, the Moe Hill grouping, with Hill throwing third rock, will line up with Keith Dagg for the cash event and may take some beating, which means, the firing should be excellent at Playland this weekend with nearly all the top curlers from the province entered. It's the first big event of the year here and the rink to watch: The Giles brothers, plus Craig Rampton. The youngsters gave Fink all he could handle last weekend, losing in the 13th end. It was their only loss.

A note, too, from Ross Oatman, who leaves soon for Nakusp "and some fine fishing," that brother Eddie, once a star of the old Cougars and professional hockey, had died at Bloomington, Minn. He was 84. Missed the item where Gordie Howe ran down a thief who grabbed a woman's purse in Houston, prompting one team official to say: "Gordie'll do anything to sell tickets." Understand, too, that the plaque marking the Charlie Thomas lacrosse box is in rather shoddy condition, and it would be nice if those responsible could rectify this situation. It is little to ask for a man who gave so much to the game.

Ken Holtzman of the world champion Oakland A's is one player who agrees with his boss Charlie Finley. Holtzman thinks Finley has a good idea when he calls for a change in baseball's ball and strike rule. What Finley proposes is three balls and three strikes and Holtzman, a pitcher, agrees, even if he appears to be committing heresy. What Holtzman says in Sports mag is that three balls and three strikes would make a big change in a pitcher's strategy. "A lot of pitchers like to throw the first ball away from the plate, but they wouldn't be able to do that any more. You would have to make sure the first pitch was a strike because if you missed with that, you would have to make the second one too good a pitch because if you had two balls right away, you'd be walking the park."

Help wanted. Pete Sallaway, who once occupied this seat, can't be kept down on his retirement. Now he has taken on the job of providing a history of baseball in the city from way back when until the present day. What Pete needs is anything from the past, pictures, records, autographs, pennants, memorabilia of any sport. The ultimate is sort of a baseball hall of fame at Lambrick Park, the home of senior baseball and a host of other sports. Sounds like a great idea. For those who can help, just call Pete. Better still, call him "Spit". That was his nickname when he was a hard-hitting infielder in his heyday. And here's the first tip, Pete. Call Ross Oatman. He can fill you in on his era here.

Gentleman Alex in Ulcer Brigade

DETROIT (AP) — Alex Delvecchio, the last vestige of the glory years of Detroit Red Wings, has ended his 23-year playing career, joining "the ulcer department" of the National Hockey League team.

The 41-year-old Detroit captain, who has scored more points in the NHL than anyone except former team-mate Gordie Howe, was named coach Wednesday night in place of Ted Garvin, native of Sarnia, Ont.

A league rule prohibits him from being a player-coach.

The announcement was made at a news conference following Detroit's 4-1 loss to Philadelphia Flyers, the Wings' ninth defeat in 12 games.

Garvin, 53, was fired after a 12-game trial as coach. Under him, Detroit got off to the poorest start in its 48-year history and is mired in last place in the East Division with five points.

"I think Garvin is a good coach, but this is a business and we're not winning," said general manager Ned Harkness, who made the change after conferring with team owner Bruce Norris.

Detroit, which finished first eight of nine years in 1949 through 1957 and won four Stanley Cup championships in the same period, has made the playoffs only once in the last seven seasons.

Much of the blame has been laid on Harkness and Jim Bishop, executive vice-president.

Delvecchio is the seventh coach in the last four years.

Delvecchio, who will be 42 next month, called his appointment, "the greatest thing that's happened in my career."

Garvin, who was behind the bench at the game, has been asked to remain in the organization.

He was coach of Detroit's Port Huron farm club of the International Hockey League before being appointed to the Red Wing job last April as replacement for fired Johnny Wilson.

When Delvecchio told his wife Theresa of his new job, she said: "You just joined the ulcer department."

Details of the appointment have not been worked out, but Delvecchio said he would ask for a written contract. Wilson and Garvin worked under handshake agreements.

Known for his gentlemanly but strong play, Delvecchio won the Lady Byng trophy for sportsmanship three times.

The veteran centre, who has 1,281 career points including 456 goals, played one game with Detroit in the 1950-51 season, then joined the team for good the next year.

Delvecchio scored one goal and had four assists in 11 games this year. He has played in 1,549 games in his career.

He said some changes would be made but he does not feel they include trading centre Marcel Dionne, who was in Garvin's doghouse.

"I think Marcel is a heck of a hockey player," said Delvecchio, native of Fort William, Ont. "He just has to be handled right. He's No. 1 on my list to talk to. . . ."

He also said he would try to talk goalie Roy Edwards out of retirement and that he has already asked Norris to try and spend "a little more time with the players."

PROOF THAT DANGERS to goaltenders include more than pucks and sticks is provided by Al Sims (23) of Boston Bruins. Sims crashes into New York goalie Ed Giacomin during unsuccessful scoring attempt in National Hockey League contest in New York. Giacomin was knocked out on third-period play and replaced by Gilles Villemure.

Rangers Find Togetherness

By The Canadian Press

It wasn't a night for goaltenders in New York, but Rod Gilbert and the Rangers aren't complaining.

The Rangers broke a seven-game winless streak—six defeats and a tie—with a 7-3 triumph over Boston Bruins in one of seven National Hockey League matches Wednesday night.

A second-period goal by Gilbert—the 272nd of his 11-year career with the Rangers—tied him with Andy Bathgate as the leading goal scorer in the club's history.

Other results were: Montreal Canadiens 4, Toronto Maple Leafs 1; New York Islanders 1, Pittsburgh Penguins 1; Philadelphia Flyers 4, Detroit Wings 1; Minnesota North Stars 5, Los Angeles Kings 2; Atlanta Flames 2, St. Louis Blues 2; and Chicago Black Hawks 1, California Golden Seals 1.

"We just weren't playing together," said Gilbert, referring to New York's longest winless streak since February, 1970. "There was no coordination between our defence and forwards, and we weren't getting any breaks."

They got a few breaks against the Bruins.

One of defenceman Brad Park's two slapshot goals deflected crazily off the leg of a Boston player and past surprised goalie Gilles Gilbert. Another time, the goalie appeared to have a New York shot stopped safely in his glove, but Pete Stemkowski hit the glove with his stick, pushing the puck into the net.

Then, after Boston's Phil Esposito scored the first of his two goals, Park scored his second and New York's Ted Irvine tallied on a short slapshot, Gilbert took the spotlight. He fired a goal past Gilbert to come within a goal of the New York record.

Goalie Ed Giacomin of the Rangers was knocked unconscious in a third-period collision with Boston defenceman Al Sims and replaced by Gilles Villemure.

"He suffered a whiplash when he got hit," said coach Larry Popein. "Then Sims went and fell on the poor guy's head. Thankfully, he won't need hospitalization."

Gilbert suffered a hand injury which forced him out of action for the third period after the Rangers had scored six goals against him.

Esposito's goals were his 17th and 18th of the year and, along with an assist, gave him a leading total of 31 points. When the smooth centre scored his record 76 goals in 1970-71 he didn't get goal No. 18 until the 23rd game.

Goaltender Wayne Thomas, defenceman Guy Lapointe and three power-play goals told the story for Montreal.

Thomas, backup to retired Ken Dryden a year ago, remains the only undefeated regular netminder in the NHL with six wins and two ties since he took over for Michel Larocque.

Mt. Douglas Tops Tourney

Mt. Douglas, fourth-place finisher in the Greater Victoria High School Boys' Volleyball League won the five-team Lower Vancouver Island tournament which ended Wednesday at Reynolds High School.

Oak Bay, the league champion, finished last and missed out on one of four Lower Island berths in the Vancouver Island championship Friday in Courtenay.

Mt. Douglas and runner-up Victoria both finished with 3-1 records but Mt. Douglas was awarded top spot on the basis of a 4-15, 15-3, 15-5 victory over the latter school during the tourney.

Reynolds, fifth in the league, split four matches in the round-robin affair and finished third while Mount View was fourth.

Instead, he stuck with the facts, just the facts.

"That was our best period of the year," he said.

The Whalers scored a team-record six goals in the first period at Boston on the way to their ninth win in 14 World Hockey Association starts and sole possession of first place in the East Division.

Flin Flon Bombers, the Eastern Division leaders, needed to rally in the third period to salvage a 3-3 tie against Kamloops Chiefs during the first game of a Western Canada Hockey League swing through British Columbia Wednesday night.

Bombers, who play against Victoria Cougars on Saturday and Tuesday in Memorial Arena, gained the tie with a third-period goal by Cam Connor.

League-leading goal-getter Rob Watt scored the other two Bomber goals with the assistance of Connor, who was traded by Cougars to Flin Flon after the pre-season schedule.

Rob Flockhart, Mal Zinger and Chris McMasters scored for Kamloops, the league's newest club.

Cavillin Tape Big Play for Lions

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions of the Canadian Football League, swinging into final preparations for Sunday's sudden-death Western Football Conference semi-final against Saskatchewan Roughriders, are pinning most of their hopes for victory on trainer Rocky Cavillin.

With four key Lions on the limp, Cavillin has his work cut out for him.

Hobbling painfully into Cavillin's treatment rooms Wednesday was first-string quarterback Don Moorhead who reinjured an ankle in last Saturday's 15-7 win over Calgary Stampeders that gave the Lions their first playoff berth since 1969.

Following close behind were running back Johnny Musso, who demolished the Stampeders almost single-handedly Saturday despite badly strained ligaments in his left knee, middle linebacker Ray Nettles, sporting a matched team of charleyhorses, and defensive end Bud Magrum, with a bruised shoulder.

Cavillin has increased the treatment schedule to two a day for all four in a bid to whip them into shape.

"They're hurting pretty bad," head coach Eagle Keys said Wednesday. "But they will be ready to play in Regina Sunday."

Musso, who carried the ball for 1,029 yards during the regular season and picked up another 473 on pass receptions, says Cavillin made the play of the game Saturday before the Lions even took to the field.

Cavillin insisted that Musso's left knee be taped up. Late in the first quarter Musso hobbled off the field after getting hit on the knee again.

"I thought I was rippel up for good and when I got hit," Musso said later. "If it hadn't been taped, it would have been."

Instead, Musso was able to return to the game a few plays later and ended the night with the Lions' only touchdown, 101 yards rushing and another 69 on pass interceptions.

Coach Keys put the club through light workouts Tuesday and again Wednesday, working on the offensive and defensive plays the Lions hope will carry them to victory over the Roughriders in Regina, where the Lions have been winless in regular-season action since 1965.

Keys expects to go with the same lineup Sunday that won over Calgary last week.

The Lions, who reached the playoffs despite a dismal record of five wins and two ties in 16 starts, were soundly beaten by Saskatchewan in the three regular-season encounters between the two clubs.

Rush vs. Pass

MONTREAL (CP) — If statistics from their three meetings this season are any indication, then Montreal Alouettes will stress the running game and Toronto Argonauts a passing attack when they meet in Toronto Sunday in the Eastern Football Conference sudden-death semi-final.

The Argos won the opener of the three-game, regular-season set in their home park 22-21. In that game the Als clobbered Toronto 235 yards to 71 on the ground, and outpassed the Argos 201-179.

When the teams played their next game in the Autostade here, the Argos needed a 50-yard field goal by Zenon Andrushysyn on the final play of the game to salvage a 23-23 tie.

Then in the third meeting, also in Montreal, the Als won 19-10 by running up 256 yards on the ground to 71 for the visitors. Toronto quarterback Joe Theismann tore the Als apart through the air—290 yards to 91—but Montreal managed to seal off the scoring pass.

In 14 games this season the Als rushed for 2,567 yards, while Toronto made 1,683 along the ground. But almost half of the Montreal ground attack came from running back John Harvey.

Absence of Confidence Hurts Favored Boxers

THE SOCCER SCENE

By Max Low

Have the Boxers lost their punch?

It certainly seems so. But the question is, can they regain that old "one-two" in time to make the B.C. Soccer League playoffs?

A quiet word with coach Ron Thompson and one or two players reveals a strange "loss of confidence" among the members of the Victoria London Boxing Club's squad.

It's strange because this is basically the same lineup which, as Victoria West-United, marched to both league and playoff honors in the old Pacific Coast circuit two seasons ago and finished runner-up last year.

And on paper the Boxing Club side, possibly next to Vancouver Italia, must be regarded as the strongest in the new B.C. League. So why all the problems?

Brian Robinson relaxed on the ferry to Vancouver last Sunday when Boxers were on the way to their key clash with Italia and chatted about it.

The 25-year-old Robinson, who works in the City Council's traffic engineering department, felt he played some of the best soccer of his life for Canada on the national team's recent tour of Europe. He scored two goals from his centre-midfield position in Canada's 6-4 loss to tough proselect team in Belfast in the final match.

"But since coming back, I've had a terrible let-down feeling and haven't been playing well at all," Robinson confessed.

This isn't too surprising — a deflation following a drop from higher calibre play. But what of the rest of the team?

BRIAN ROBINSON
. . . senses a letdown

Robinson said that when he came back, he found the team was in a rut and seemed to be "playing at half-speed."

"No one has confidence in anyone else and everyone seems afraid to make a mistake," he said. "You look for someone to pass the ball to and no one is there — they're all hiding.

"With the talent we've got, we should be so confident. Right now we just come out of it in spurts, but we've got to get over it altogether."

They didn't get over it altogether Sunday, though. The lack of confidence and the apprehension were still there as Italia took a 2-1 decision at Empire Stadium. The margin could have been far wider but for the Boxers' goalkeeper, Kjeld Brodsgaard.

On the bus home, Thompson agreed the confidence was missing but he still couldn't explain it.

"You can talk until you're blue in the face about what you should do, but when you get on the field it's a different matter," said Thompson.

Thompson realizes Boxers must snap out of it soon. Sunday's defeat was the third of the season. That's more losses than any other club in the top seven. Boxers hold down fourth place but they're only one point ahead of Westminster Blues and North Shore Pauls and the Victoria team has played one more game than both of them.

Thompson believes his Boxers will "snap out of it" this Saturday when they play co-leaders, Pegasus, at Royal Athletic Park. He has to believe it, but he won't have key man Robinson to help.

Robinson, who hopes to make the 1976 Olympics in Montreal "and then pack it in," left Wednesday for Haiti. There he will play two games as Canada gives Haiti's national team a warm-up for its World Cup qualifying game against Mexico. Canada was eliminated by Mexico last summer.

London Boxing Club has a good team, combining the youth of Ken Ross, Jan Bentley, Dean Stokes, George Pakos, Bob Bolitho, Garnet Moen, Frank Woods and Brodsgaard with the experience of Jim Irvine, Howie Anderson, Tom Forrester, Robinson and, when he plays, Thompson.

Thompson was on the bench again last Sunday. He, too, doesn't feel he "is up for it" and says he hasn't been playing well.

Thompson has to decide on his starting lineup for Saturday at training tonight. If veteran Brian Hughes is fit and available, he could be a big help.

But to achieve the dual purpose of replacing Robinson and bringing back that old drive and confidence, Thompson has really only one course of action available — to play himself.

As trainer Dave Swanbeck put it plainly on the way home:

"Okay Ron, we all know it if you don't . . . your holiday's over."

Soccer Fans Fight Police

ROME (AP) — Lazio of Rome beat Ipswich, 4-2, Wednesday night in a stormy match for the UEFA Cup soccer tournament, but the English team qualified for the third round on a 6-4 goal aggregate.

Ipswich won the first-leg match, 4-0. Lazio was leading, 2-0, at halftime, but when Dutch referee Van Der Kroft granted a penalty for the English team in the 73rd minute, a dozen fans stormed the pitch and engaged in a fight with police.

A few minutes later, more fans tried to reach the playing ground and were stopped by police.

In other UEFA Cup play, Leeds United and Hibernian of Scotland battled to their second straight scoreless draw but Leeds won on penalties, five to four. Tottenham Hotspur defeated Aberdeen of Scotland, 4-1, and won the aggregate, 5-2. Wolverhampton downed Locomotiv Leipzig, 4-1, to tie the aggregate at 4-4 but the East German side won on the basis of away goals.

Males Beat Females

WINNIPEG (CP) — Harvey Mazinke of Regina won the second battle of the sexes on the CBC Curling Classic, scoring three in the tenth end Wednesday night to defeat Vera Pezer of Saskatoon, 5-4.

The Pezer foursome, the Canadian women's champions, came within a shot of beating the reigning national men's titlist but the Saskatoon skip missed her final two rocks to allow Mazinke to escape with the win.

Earlier Wednesday Peter Hope of Dartmouth, N.S. scored three on the fifth end to defeat reigning world champion Kjell Oscarius of Sweden, 6-4.

School Soccer Repeat

Reynolds has already carried off the Times Trophy.

The team did that a week ago when it battled to a 2-2 tie with second-place Mt. Douglas to clinch the Greater Victoria High School Soccer League title.

Now Reynolds will be out to add the Colonist Cup for the league's playoff title when it takes on Mt. Doug again in the final on Friday night at 8 at Royal Athletic Park.

Coach Tony Fantillo has only one problem. Midfield player Bob Barnes, a Reynolds' regular throughout the season, is injured and won't play in the final.

His place will be taken by Keith Thompson. The rest of the Reynolds team is Glen Robbins in goal, Mike Hardy, Jim McHaffie and Doug Welbourne as backs, Tom Jones and Graham Ball in the midfield and forwards Mike Dominique, Howie Kirk, Greg Booth and Terry Gibbard.

Inside-right Kirk was league champion scorer with 25 goals and Booth, who played only the last six games in the forward line, scored 15 goals.

Mt. Doug coach Brian Cornall won't name his starting lineup until just before the game, but he's confident.

"We have so much depth in our squad of 19 players that any of, say, 16 are capable of starting," said Cornall.

The school's top scorer in league play was Brock Coupar, who had 16 goals. Alan Gray scored nine.

Reynolds finished two points ahead of Mt. Doug with 12 wins, two losses and two ties. Mt. Douglas had 10 wins, two losses and four ties.

Whichever way it goes Friday night, it should be a close game. Both previous meetings between the schools produced ties—3-3 and 2-2.

Blood Helps Junior In Pro Grid Project

TORONTO (CP) — Blood is thicker than ethics, at least where John Bassett and John Bassett Jr., are concerned.

Bassett Sr. went on record this week as saying Toronto Argonauts would not exercise their contractual right to exclusive use of CNE Stadium for pro football in the event the proposed World Football League gets going and its Toronto franchise applies for dates.

He's chairman of the Canadian Football League team's board and, through Baton Broadcasting, owner of the Argos.

John Jr., president of Toronto Toros of the World Hockey Association, will be chairman of the new WFL team and Herb Solway, a Toronto lawyer, its president.

Both are Argo directors.

"There's no way I'd prevent my son's team playing there," Bassett Sr. said, adding that it would be a different matter if his son wasn't involved with the new team.

The Toros-WFL group is involved in building a new arena-stadium project but so far the scheme has not made any progress in that direction. The WFL is to begin operations in 1974.

"There's no doubt in my mind it'll go," the Argo president said. He campaigned unsuccessfully in recent years for the CFL to take in United States teams to strengthen the league financially.

He contended that if such idealists as Robert Schmertz, who wanted a CFL team based in New York's Yankee Stadium, were turned down they would form a third professional league.

"These are serious men," Bassett Sr. continued, "promoters with money, stadiums and willing to spend.

"Nick Mileti in Cleveland already has made a $750,000 profit taking in partners. My son had an offer of $500,000 for his group's franchise."

Bassett Jr. said WHA organizer Gary Davidson, who resigned as president of the hockey league to absorb himself with the WFL, is working his way through 31 applications for WFL franchises. The applicants are from 18 cities, including Tokyo and Mexico City and one from Vancouver.

He said his own arena-stadium plans have been narrowed down to four sites within 20 miles of city hall, two within the Metropolitan Toronto boundaries.

BALL SLATE PICKED

Veteran softball executive Jim Scullion is the new president of the Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League.

A vice-president last year, Scullion was named Wednesday at the annual general meeting to succeed Harry Holness.

Del Bertrand was named first vice-president and Jim Hubbard was chosen second vice-president while Joe Grexton returns as secretary-treasurer.

Team representatives indicated nine of the 10 league entries will definitely return to play at Central and Heywood Avenue Parks. CFB Esquimalt was the only doubtful returnee.

Final acceptance of entries for the 1974 season will be in March.

$1/2B to Ease Winter Living Pain

OTTAWA (CP) — More than half of the one billion dollars in extra government spending proposed for the current fiscal year is designed to ease the cost-of-living burden for many this winter.

About $222 million is desitned for larger family allowances, $162 million for Local Initiatives Program grants, $65 million for increased veterans pensions, $52 million for milk subsidies and $30 million for job creation — a total of $531 million.

The supplementary spending estimates were tabled in the Commons Wednesday and most are not expected to receive much opposition when studied by the estimates committee.

The addition brings forecast 1973-74 spending to a record $20.291 billion. The comparable figure for the previcus fiscal year was $17.830 billion.

The $222 million earmarked for family allowances is to boost montly allowances to a flat $12 a child from an average of $7.20, retroactive to Oct. 1. It does not cover the proposed family income security plan which would raise the average monthly allowance to $20 a child, effective Jan. 1.

The L.I.P. appropriation would boost that program's total to $690 million from $528 million. The extra funds are to cover the extension of last winter's program into the summer, plus the start of a new program this winter.

Increased disability pensions and allowances for war veterans, announced earlier are designed to offset inflation.

HAVE-NOTS GET MORE

OTTAWA (CP) — While increasing its 1973-74 transfer payments to provinces over-all, the federal government is giving more money to five of the so-called have-not provinces, but Manitoba and Saskatchewan will get less.

The idea of the transfers is to bring provincial resources in seven lower income provinces in line with the national average. The main spending estimates tabled in the Commons last Feb. 20 allotted $1.218 billion for this purpose.

In supplementary estimates tabled Wednesday by C. M. Drury, treasury board president, the government revised the figures, reflecting the changing tax yields of the various provinces.

Newfoundland, allotted $129 million in the original estimates, receives another $14.7 million.

Prince Edward Island, with an original $27.9 million, will get an additional $1.8 million.

Nova Scotia's original $131.3 million increases by $21 million, while New Brunswick's forecast $119.9 million goes up by $9.2 million.

Quebec was originally to receive $562.1 million and this is being increased by $75.5 million.

But Manitoba and Saskatchewan, the only other provinces receiving transfer payments, will get less under the new estimates. Manitoba was to receive $87.2 million, but the adjustments in supplementary estimates reduce this by $865,000.

And it's a far bigger reduction for Saskatchewan. The original estimate of $110.3 million is being reduced by $15.2 million.

More for Drug Battle

OTTAWA (FP) — The federal health department has asked Parliament for an additional $210,000 for its illegal drug analysis and indentification service provided to police forces across Canada, according to supplementary budgetary estimates tabled in the Commons Wednesday.

The reason: Police forces in such cities as Vancouver, Toronto and Montreal have seized so many samples of illegal drugs so far this fiscal year that Ottawa will now need $600,000 to analyze the number expected by the end of the fiscal year, next spring.

Dr. A. B. Morrison, assistant deputy minister of health, said Wednesday that regional drug laboratories across the country last year analyzed and identified about 40,000 drug samples for police forces.

This fiscal year, the government expects to analyze more than 60,000 samples.

And again this year, it is expected that half of the samples will be cannabis, that is, hashish and "grass."

The police need to have the drugs identified to determine whether a drug prosecution is warranted and then to obtain a conviction.

The identification service is provided free by Ottawa as a part of its fight against drug abuse.

The health department also analyzes a very small number of drug samples each year for family doctors, who are trying to counsel suspected drug users.

In such cases, the law has been changed so that the doctor is not charged for possession of trafficking in drugs turned over to the health department for analysis.

As might be expected, Vancouver, Toronto and Montreal police forces provide the largest number of drugs for analysis.

Cannabis is the most common, followed by LSD, the opiates including heroin, and the amphetamine drugs including "speed."

Pollution War Bill

OTTAWA (FP) — As a part of its broader fight against pollution, the federal government is now taking steps to prevent pollution or at least clean up the pollution from its own federal facilities, from military bases to harbors and airports.

Ottawa has allocated $6-million this fiscal year as part of its own anti-pollution efforts. Most of the money will be spent building sewage treatment plants; some of it will be saved to clean up any spills of pollutants from or at federal facilities.

The largest single amount, $1.483-million, has been allocated for the department of national defence, for use primarily at military bases.

Dief Wages New Attack

OTTAWA (CP) — Former Prime Minister John Diefenbaker once again Wednesday rapped the government for failing to produce guest lists for official functions attended by the Queen during her visit to Canada last summer.

If made public, he charged, the lists would show "the greatest accumulation of Grits this country has witnessed."

Prime Minister Trudeau said compilation of the lists is still taking place. Diefenbaker first asked for the lists two months ago.

BOOZE TAGS EYED

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government has proposed that all alcoholic beverages have the percentage of alcohol by volume declared on the main labels of bottles.

At present, alcohol volumes are required on labels of all alcoholic beverages, liqueurs and cordials containing less than 39.94 per cent alcohol.

Implementation date is expected to be before the end of the year.

Order in the Court! Univac Wants to Speak

By IAN DARLING
Times Staff

When an accused person goes to court today, he appears before a judge, but in future he might also confront a computer operator.

The possibility of installing computers in provincial courts to help judges schedule trial dates is being considered in the attorney-general's department.

Deputy attorney-general David Vickers said in an interview Wednesday the department might use computers to cope with the increasing number of court cases.

The court lists, he said, are "at an unacceptable level."

Vickers said he is aware that in Victoria a lengthy delay often occurs between the time a person is arrested and when he appears in court.

Trial dates now are being set for early 1974.

But Vickers also described the situation here as "no more or less severe than in the rest of the province."

Departmental studies indicate the crime rate in B.C. will increase by 12 per cent each year.

Using computers is one way of dealing with the increase, Vickers said.

It is not the only way.

Vickers said an inter-departmental task force is studying the judicial process to determine how to deal with the crime rate.

The complete judicial system could be revamped as a result of the study, and decisions are expected to be made next year, he said.

Vickers said the study might suggest the department remove from the courts drug possession charges.

Removing them, Vickers thought, could reduce the courts' workload by 30 per cent.

Asked to explain how drug cases could be taken out of the courts since the drug laws are written into the Criminal Code by the federal government, Vickers said: "We might treat it as a medical problem."

Man Killed By Car

An 84-year-old Sooke man was killed at 6:45 p.m. Wednesday when he was struck by a car as he walked in the rain in the 5700 block Sooke near Saseenos Road.

Sooke RCMP said Neils Christian Neilsen appeared to have been crossing the road to his home in the Sunny Shores Trailer Court when he was hit by the car driven by Robert Martin, 27, of 6660 Sooke Road.

He was pronounced dead at the scene by Dr. Brian Perry-Whittingham.

Police said an inquest will be held but no date has been set.

Minister Eases Fears On Goldstream Plan

By BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

Highway widening in Goldstream Park will not begin for at least five years—if it happens at all, Highways Minister Graham Lea said Wednesday.

Lea revealed a memorandum he has received from chief highways engineer J. A. Dennison outlining progress on the total road widening program from Victoria to Parksville.

Under the program, the mile-long stretch of the Trans-Canada Highway running through Goldstream Park would be widened from two to four lanes — a move which has drawn strong protests from local environmental groups since it would require relocation of the salmon-spawning river.

"Depending on funds available," Dennison's memo said, "it will probably take at least five years to complete but more likely seven or eight years might be more realistic.

"We can get by with what we have in the park for a few years and cannot talk about alternatives because not all the surveys have been completed," it said.

It will be at least a year, the engineer said, before enough data has been collected on the Goldstream widening to go to the public, as Lea has promised he will, and present a total picture of the problem.

And Lea was quick to emphasize Wednesday that a great many "ifs" lie in the way of the Goldstream widening.

First it must be determined that no alternative route is feasible, he said, explaining that the present two lanes could perhaps be used as a northbound lane and another route found for the southbound lane.

"Anyway we are committed to four lanes to Parksville but Goldstream or other areas may be excepted," said Lea.

The minister said he didn't know where the Goldstream Park Preservation Society, the group formed to protest the widening, got their information from because there are no definite plans in existence yet.

The problem with leaving two lanes in the one stretch of highway he said, is that a bottleneck could be formed and would prove hazardous.

"But in five years we may not even need a wider highway," Lea said, since the government is looking into alternative forms of transportation, especially public rapid transit systems.

Deaf children identified by new 'D' vest with designer Ian Wallace

Optimists Looking to D-Day

There have been five traffic accidents involving deaf children in Greater Victoria over the past year and when a little girl was killed last July, Optimist Ian Wallace got mad.

Ian drives the bus provided by the Optimist Club of Victoria which daily delivers 17 deaf youngsters to and from their homes and special classes at Frank Hobbs and Doncaster schools.

He has come up with an idea — a brilliant yellow vest with big blue D — the children now wear to warn drivers these youngsters can't hear car horns.

The Duker vest — named after seven-year-old Julie Duker who died after a traffic mishap last summer — has the solid support of parents, has been endorsed by all area police departments and may become an international project of Optimist clubs.

Club president John Pierpoint said samples of the item, which costs $6 and is lightweight washable nylon, have been sent to 13 Canadian and American clubs in the Pacific Northwest to help sell the project and it is now being considered at the headquarters of Optimists International in St. Louis, Mo.

The sleeveless jacket is light enough for summer wear and can be worn over winter clothing. The aim is to have the children wear it at play.

The local club has provided one for each youngster it ferries to school, complete with embroidered name, and "the kids love it," said Wallace.

Pierpoint said he hopes the day will soon come when the Optimist crest is worn on the front.

Planes Must Leave

Victoria Flying Services, described by Mayor Peter Pollen Wednesday as "squatters" on the Inner Harbor, will be given one month to vacate its operating base there.

The eviction order was expected to be given formal city council approval this afternoon, more than a year after an earlier order to quit was issued but never implemented by the city.

Pollen said the firm had been occupying crown land entirely free of charge for three years and as lengthy negotiations between the city and VFS had produced no satisfactory result the city had no option but to move the seaplane operation.

"They refuse to pay any rent until such time as they can be given a long-term lease on the property," he said. "They have been literally squatters on the Inner Harbor at no revenue to the federal government or the city."

The city leases the harbor property from the ministry of transport, and has been attempting to enter a sub-lease arrangement with the firm, which would involve payment of three years' rental arrears.

Company president Bill Sylvester said he had offered to pay the back rent amounting to some $3,000, provided he could be assured of reasonable tenure. But the city had insisted occupancy would be only on a month-to-month basis.

Sylvester, who expressed surprise at the city's latest move, said finding another good harbor location would pose serious difficulties.

But he discounted the possibility that the firm's downtown operation would have to close.

"I don't think the mayor wants to put us out of business," he added.

Jail Ends Summer Of Crime

Twenty-one-year-old Mark Twiss, no fixed address, was sentenced to 10 months in jail when he pleaded guilty in Sidney provincial court today to a total of 20 charges involving forgery, false pretence and theft under $200.

The charges stemmed from a series of offences in Sidney, Saanich and Victoria between July and September this year.

In addition to the jail term Judge D. G. Ashby ordered Twiss to serve two years probation following his release.

Court Appeal Urged

Victoria city council was urged today to appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada a judgment handed down Wednesday, which requires the city to pay about $55,000 to the Aberdeen Private Hospital for the care of welfare patients.

The judgment, on a 2-1 decision by the B.C. Court of Appeal, upheld a ruling last year by the B.C. Supreme Court.

City solicitor Jake de Villiers said today the reason for the decision against the city appears to be a desire to await the outcome of a similar case already before the Supreme Court of Canada, involving the Park Lane Private Hospital in Vancouver and the city of Vancouver.

A motion recommending appeal to the higher court was on the agenda for today's council meeting.

Teachers Never Saw Their Doctor

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

Two teachers who spent nine months in Arizona recovering from a bout of influenza did not see a doctor at any time prior to leaving, county court Judge M. L. Drake was told in an appeal hearing Wednesday.

Greater Victoria school board is appealing a unanimous decision by a three-man board of reference in October, 1972, which reinstated the two teachers.

At noon today the hearing concluded and the judge reserved judgment.

Bona MacMurchie, 63, and Evelyn Ball, 50, both of 3825 Kremlin, had been fired by the school board for "neglect of duty" in July, 1972, while they were still in Arizona. They appealed the firing to the board of reference.

"Neither lady produced or called before the board (of reference) any medical evidence to prove they were ill for the whole period," school board lawyer Brian Smith told the court.

The two women got the flu around the first of October 1971 and were at home until Nov. 9 of that year, when they flew to Phoenix, Arizona, said Smith.

Substitute teachers taught Miss MacMurchie's class at Margaret Jenkins elementary and Miss Ball's at Lampson Street elementary.

The school board claims the two teachers have not proven they were ill for all of the time they were away from the classroom, from October 1971 until the end of June 1972.

During the month they were home with the flu Miss MacMurchie talked several times on the telephone to physician Dr. D. M. Whitley, describing their symptoms and temperatures.

He "prescribed bedrest", said Smith.

'Go to Arizona,' Doctor Said

"They were never examined by Dr. Whitley. They never asked Dr. Whitley to make a house call," he said.

"Not once in the whole time they were in Arizona did they ever consult a doctor," Smith said.

No new evidence is being presented at the appeal; Drake is simple reviewing evidence presented at the closed board of reference hearing last year.

Miss MacMurchie testified that on Nov. 3, 1971, Whitley had advised her in a telephone call to go to Arizona with Miss Ball to recuperate from the flu that continued to bother them.

Smith said Whitley testified he did not recall giving that advice but agreed he might have suggested it facetiously.

The board of reference was satisfied the two women took the advice seriously, said Smith. They left for Arizona six days later.

While in Phoenix Miss Ball and Miss MacMurchie wrote what Smith called "self-serving letters" to Whitley describing their condition.

"We feel we are not ready to tackle day after day of teaching or the cold, damp weather," Miss Ball said in one letter.

Whitley replied only to one of these letters, one in May, said Smith, and the doctor testified it had become obvious he was being used by the teachers.

Asked whether he thought Miss Ball a hypochondriac, Whitley testified "perhaps".

Medical Certificate Refused

In May 1972 the teachers wrote Whitley asking him to complete a form saying they were too ill to return to work. He wrote back refusing, but they never received the letter until months later.

Smith commented on the similarity of complaints mentioned by the two in letters to Whitley — lack of stamina, digestive and nervous upsets.

"You get the impression you're not talking about two people but one," he said.

He cited four other instances between 1967, when they began living together, and October 1971 when the two teachers were off sick simultaneously.

Lloyd McKenzie, lawyer for the teachers, pointed out the board of reference sat for four days, heard 17 witnesses, received 52 exhibits, and came up with a unanimous decision in favor of the teachers.

He said it was up to the doctor to decide whether the teachers' illness warranted a house call, not for the women to ask him to come.

"Flu was in epidemic proportions in Victoria at this time," he said, and Whitley was pressed for time.

MacKenzie said the doctor set himself against the teachers in early 1972, as he "had decided that they were feigning and that he was being put upon and used".

He said Whitley "had guilt on his conscience" about his method of diagnosing the teachers over the telephone.

Whitley supplied the letters written to him from Arizona to school board officials without the teachers' permission, MacKenzie said.

The lawyer referred to testimony by Dr. Peter Banks that it is "impossible" to diagnose influenza over the phone, and that some kinds of flu can last for six months with some people.

Patient Care Worries Strike-Wary Hospital

Patient care in Gorge Road extended care hospital will "deteriorate considerably if the Hospital Employees Union forces a strike," B.C. Hospitals Association said today.

"As a result of this threatened strike action, the hospital finds itself in an extremely difficult position because it cannot retaliate by the industrial mechanism of lockout as the patients' welfare is at stake.

"Patients in an extended care hospital cannot be moved to another area and receive proper care as there are no other facilities to receive them," the association said.

Employees of the hospital will be asked at union meetings Friday night and early Saturday to approve an executive recommendation that 72 hours strike notice be served against the hospital.

The 350 employees, members of the Hospital Employees Union seeking a first agreement, voted 98.2 per cent in favor of strike action.

The union said it has offered arbitration of the dispute as an alternative to a strike but the hospital refused.

Issues include equal pay, discrimination against women, seniority and an apprenticeship program.

The union has said the hospital wants "discriminatory wage rates" which would see practical nurses paid less than orderlies while it wants equal pay, referring to some successful arbitration cases this year including one at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

The BCHA agreed today the dispute "involves pay rates for practical nurses, among other demands" but said practical nurses are receiving the same pay as orderlies in only three of the 77 hospitals in British Columbia which are covered by HEU certification.

Joe Roberts, employee relations director of BCHA, said the association "has asked the union to accept the same standard contract which is in effect in the overwhelming majority of hospitals in this province."

This, he said, will give Gorge Road employees a retroactive wage increase of $37.50 a month making the lowest wage in the hospital $504 a month.

Fuel Shortage To Boost Food

A fuel shortage will undoubtedly result in a rise in the price of food, Jack Wessel, economist for the B.C. Federation of Agriculture, said today.

Wessel said the agriculture industry in B.C. is one of the major users of fossil fuels and an increase in the cost of gasoline or oil, would be reflected in food prices.

"Substituting manpower for fossil fuels won't help things either," he said. "It would also result in an increase in production costs."

Provincial horticulturist Alan Littler said cost of imports from the United States and Mexico would go up if the U.S. government cuts the vehicle speed limit to 50 miles an hour.

"B.C. is dependent on many perishable and non-perishable commodities from the U.S." he said. "If the speed limit is reduced it will mean trucks will take an extra day or more to transport food—fresh or canned—to British Columbia. This means extra wages and the impact will be reflected in food prices."

Wessel said an increase in the price of fuel would also affect Saanich's $1,500,000 greenhouse industry.

"They depend on oil for heating," he pointed out. "This would mean increased production costs for the 2,800,000 pounds of tomatoes grown under glass. The extra costs would have to be passed onto the consumer.

"It is difficult to grasp that a resource so far away as oil can have an impact on food production."

SAVING THE TREES by splitting the traffic was the solution Saanich devised in widening Shelbourne Street. Dual "carriageway," which eventually will extend from Kenmore to Mount Douglas Park, will preserve leafy plane trees planted as a memorial to First World War casualties. There will be two-lanes on each side when project is completed. (John McKay photo.)

Spaghetti Sauce Recipe Keeps Freezer in Mind

By MARY MOORE

Good cooks for large families frequently write to me asking for Spaghetti Meat Sauce.

I have a 13-cup recipe using ground chuck that may be frozen in portions suitable for your family. It clings to the spaghetti strands when it is served and will please our Italian friends.

ITALIAN TOMATO MEAT SAUCE
(For Spaghetti Suppers)

2 lbs. ground chuck beef
1 bay leaf
Two 10-oz. cans mushroom stems and pieces including liquid.
2 cloves garlic finely chopped
1 large green pepper chopped
1½ c. chopped onion
Two 28-oz. cans tomatoes
Two 5½-oz. cans tomato paste
Two 7½-oz. cans tomato sauce
2 tsp. oregano
2 tsp. basil
1 tbsp. salt
3 tbsp. sugar
¼ tsp. pepper
1/3 c. Parmesan cheese (grated)

In an outsize kettle break up the ground beef with your fingers, add bay leaf and saute, stirring constantly, until gray. (You do not need to add any fat.)

Add all remaining ingredients and simmer steadily, uncovered, for 1½ hours stirring frequently.

I suggest that you use sufficient sauce for a current meal. Cool all of remainder and apportion into plastic containers with tight-fitting lids and freeze for future meals.

This was greatly approved by my grandson Davey who is a spaghetti and meat sauce expert.

JELLY SIDE DOWN
nancy stahl

Dear Mrs. Hall,

I am terribly sorry that I didn't reply sooner to the note you sent me last Tuesday, but I didn't find it until I washed Eric's brown corduroy school pants this morning.

It certainly was a long note. By the time the washer finished spinning, I found so many pieces of paper that I had to wash the entire load over again.

I know that it was an important note, too. I mean, what with molding character and teaching long division, you certainly don't have time to write long notes for pleasure. Besides, one piece (the one stuck to a navy blue stretch sock) said "Urgent."

Since it was obviously so important, I picked all the pieces out of the lint filter and off the clothes and tried to put them together. I'm sorry that the school board gives you such inferior paper, most of the note had turned into a sort of slimy goo, even with the machine set on "Gentle." Unfortunately the only piece I could read, besides the one that said "Urgent," said "Show."

The only show I can think of is a school production like the one I made eighteen Bluebell costumes for in 1968. That was the same year I was Room Mother, cookie chairman for the PTA, and drove six little girls to hula dancing lessons every Tuesday afternoon.

I don't do that sort of thing now, Mrs. Hall. I mean, "for everything there is a season," and between my bursitis and hot flashes, I'm just not in season anymore. It's no great loss, actually; I put all the Bluebell sleeves in backwards.

There is one other possible interpretation, but somehow I can't imagine that you conduct "Show-and-Tell" in the sixth grade. Of course we know that they still tell. Heaven knows he's told us a lot about you. And I want you to know that we don't believe even half of it.

But if he's showing anything he shouldn't, I certainly hope you'll phone me immediately.

dear abby

Computing a Loss

DEAR ABBY: If you use my letter, please don't use my name. I already feel like a first class fool. I am a 58-year-old widow who signed up with a computer dating service four months ago.

I was interviewed in person and said I liked classical music and theatre, and only wanted a presentable escort. I paid them $398, and they guaranteed me two dates a month with a man supposedly selected by computer whose interests would match mine.

None of the characters they came up with were even presentable. All impressed me as men who were looking for a meal ticket. Some were insulting.

After four months without one suitable date, I asked this company for a $200 refund. They turned me down. I saw my lawyer, who said I was an idiot for having gone for a deal like this in the first place.

I could sue them, but I don't want to publicize my foolishness. I ask you, are all these mating and dating services just out to take people? And where does a respectable woman go to meet a decent man? Been Had.

DEAR BEEN: I've had both bad and good reports on computer dating and mating services. (Mostly bad, which is not surprising since people write to me about their bad breaks — not their good.) I agree with your lawyer. Respectable women meet decent men thru mutual friends, or in decent places like volunteer organizations, church groups, and adult education classes.

DEAR ABBY: I am 17 years old and am still a virgin. This guy I'll call Randy asked me to go all the way with him. I told him I was saving myself for marriage, and he said I was foolish because no guy wants a virgin anymore. Is that true?

Randy signed up for the navy for four years and he is leaving soon. Do you think a girl should get that serious with a guy before he goes into the navy? He probably just wants somebody to write to, but I am afraid to get involved with him knowing he'll be tied up with the Navy for so long.

Please tell me what to do as I am all mixed up. — In Doubt.

DEAR IN DOUBT: Slow up, young lady, or you will be in TROUBLE. Plenty of guys want their brides to be virgins so don't let Randy sell you a bill of goods' He sounds like an immature, irresponsible kid you would do well to stay away from.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "Just A Nice Girl": The "signals" a girl sends out are the way she walks, talks, and dresses. "Packaging" is important. Some girls dress to invite rape, but they're insulted if a fellow winks at them.

Confidential to the wife of an unfaithful husband: Don't ask yourself, "What does she have that I don't have?" (The answer is "Nothing.") Better ask yourself, "What has SHE given him that I haven't?

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Solid results are featured. Those who demanded results are now likely to express satisfaction. Your approach is thorough and you detect flaws. Quality becomes your ally. You will receive meaningful compliment.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Movement, travel and visits could be featured. Gemini, Virgo figure prominently, you are provided with valuable information. Key is to use it wisely. Relative asks you to be discreet. Comply. You are on brink of discovery.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you draw people to you with their problems, many persons confide in you and accept your counsel. You deal many times with Aries, Libra individuals. Travel indicated for December. You are ambitious, active and fond of faraway places. You perceive future trends and you are an accurate prognosticator. You aid the underdog and are actually better at helping others than when it comes to aiding yourself.

When you buy a washer or dryer, you will of course recieve a booklet of directions on how to use the specific model. Self-service laundries usually display the instructions on a large poster. Nevertheless, new homemakers and career girls will find the 20-page illustrated booklet "Wash in or Wash-out" helpful.

The booklet offers detailed advice how to get the most from your laundry equipment.

It tells you, for instance, what goes into the washer besides dirty clothes; detergent, bleach and fabric softener. It also explains how these should be used. For instance, chlorine bleach should never be used with wool or silk, because it causes bright colors to fade. It also eats holes into certain fabrics, unless it is diluted before it is added to the filled washer. According to the booklet, oxygen bleach is safe for all fabrics and most effective when used in hot water.

There are also directions on how long to wash, rinse and spin different fabrics and how to dry them.

You are warned that nylon picks up colors from other clothes. Therefore always wash white nylon lingerie separately. Since oily spots are difficult to remove from polyester, give shirt collars and grease spots special pre-laundering treatment.

Nutrition Survey Has Surprises For Everyone

By JEFF CARRUTHERS
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The report of the $2 million Nutrition Canada survey published this week contains a few surprises for scientists, politicians and Canadians alike.

And the biggest and most welcome surprise, according to Health Minister Marc Lalonde, is the finding that malnutrition and poverty don't seem to go hand in hand, as many Canadians have believed.

Dr. A. B. Morrison, assistant deputy minister of health, suggested at a news conference that the substantial malnutrition uncovered by the cross-Canada survey seems to correlate with lifestyle rather than with economic situation.

The survey reveals that malnutrition is a problem, in terms of the amount of protein found in blood, for about 30 per cent of Canadian pregnant women. In terms of protein in diet, about 15 per cent of pregnant women and a slightly higher percentage among Indians face a protein deficiency.

In terms of diets, there were also protein deficiencies uncovered in about 15 to 25 per cent adolescent girls surveyed. And some children under six years of age were underweight, suggesting protein-calorie-malnutrition.

Health Minister Lalonde said the negative correlation between income and malnutrition "puts into question a lot of broad statements put out by politicians of all stripes across the land" and undoubtedly changes the type of response governments will likely come up with to make sure malnutrition is not a problem of the poor.

At the same time, he noted that health department scientists plan to look more closely at the data for the two-year, cross-country survey of 21,000 Canadians, to see if there is a chance that the very poor might in fact suffer from malnutrition more often than other Canadians.

The suggestion was that the broad, national analysis might not detect such a correlation. Mr. Lalonde also in effect rejected recent calls for a national school lunch program, explaining the survey does not seem to offer evidence that such a costly program would be worthwhile.

The health minister and his officials listed some other surprises uncovered by the nutrition survey:

—The low serum folate levels in a large number of Canadians, even though there was no evidence of actual folate deficiency anemia. Folic acid is a B vitamin needed for producing nucleic acids responsible for the transfer of hereditary information among cells.

—The prevalence of moderate enlargement of the thyroid among Canadians. Some scientists have already suggested it means Canadians are getting too much iodine in their diet and that it might require a reduction in the iodine added to salt. The health department plans further research to determine the cause, including why it is more of a problem on the Prairies.

—The widespread deficiency of iron among males, in addition to the expected problem among adolescent girls and pregnant women. The finding destroys the long-held belief that the problem was restricted to young women.

The survey did show that it is in fact a serious problem among pregnant women: One-quarter of pregnant women generally and one-third of pregnant Indian women have inadequate iron intakes.

Lalonde said he was not particularly surprised about the finding that about half of Canadians are overweight. The prevalence of obesity increases with age.

He said that the solution to the obesity problem involves changing our sedentary life-style, by exercising more, as well as changing eating habits. The survey found that the food intake of fat people did not differ that much from the food intake of leaner Canadians.

Also not surprising is the general finding that the Eskimo and Indian peoples suffer more widely and acutely from many nutritional deficiencies than Canadians generally.

As examples, pregnant Eskimo women suffer from a serious calcium deficiency, compared with merely a less-than-satisfactory situation among pregnant women generally.

And intakes of vitamin C among Eskimo infants and older children are seriously deficient, compared to the general population.

More detailed reports on a regional basis, covering dental health, and covering Indians and Eskimos are scheduled to be released next spring.

Thorny Thistle Bud Makes Good Eating

By LON WOOD
Times Staff

It was an impassioned plea — zinging over the phone lines from New York:

"There are four truckloads of artichokes heading up to British Columbia, Canada from California — and no one is going to know how to cook them," said the feminine voice with the Brooklyn accent.

The voice identified herself as Mary Jo Oakley. She was calling for the Artichoke Advisory Board for whom she is handling public relations.

"Can you use any recipes?" she asked.

I admitted to being intimidated by artichokes displayed in Victoria markets in past — because I didn't know how to prepare or eat them. On vacation in California we once drove through Watsonville — "The Artichoke Centre of the World" — but we didn't stop to sample the thorny item.

"Sure, send some recipes," I said. "But only on the condition you advise the advisory board to change the sign over the main drag in Watsonville to 'The Artichoke Heart of the World'."

Mary Jo's bundle of recipes arrived three days later — air mail, special delivery. It included a biography of the artichoke and the straight faced enjoinder to observe National Artichoke Week April 26 through May 5 — in the U.S.

The artichoke is really the immature flower bud of a thistle, says the biography. If you look closely at the anatomy you'll see the outer leaves have small thorns.

Preparation is quite simple. If the vegetable is to be served with a dip, it is trimmed up a bit and then boiled until tender.

The object of this "finger food" is the broad, edible base of the leaf. Merely dip the base in an accompanying sauce, scrape through the teeth, and discard the rest of the leaf.

After all the leaves have been pulled off you'll come to the "fuzzy choke." Remove the choke with a knife and fork, split it open and you'll find the "delectable" heart — eaten with knife and fork.

"One of the most universally popular — and simplest — accompaniments for hot or cold artichokes is lemon butter," says the biography.

PREPARATION

Wash artichokes. Cut off stems at base and remove small bottom leaves. If desired, trim tips of leaves and cut off about 1 inch from top of artichokes. Stand artichokes upright in deep saucepan large enough to hold snugly. Add ¼ teaspoon salt for each artichoke and 2 to 3 inches boiling water. Add 1 tablespoon lemon juice. Cover and boil gently 30 to 45 minutes or until base can be pierced easily with fork. (Add a little more boiling water if needed.) Gently spread leaves and remove choke (thistle portion) from centre of artichokes with metal spoon. Turn artichokes upside down to drain.

LEMON BUTTER ARTICHOKES
(Serves Four)

4 medium artichokes, prepared as directed.
½ cup butter or margarine
2 tablespoons lemon juice
¼ teaspoon pepper.

Cook artichokes according to directions. Just before artichokes are done, melt butter; stir in remaining ingredients. Serve with hot or chilled artichokes.

LEMON-MAYONNAISE ARTICHOKES
(Serves Six)

1 cup mayonnaise
4 teaspoons lemon juice
2 teaspoons prepared mustard
¼ teaspoon coarse black pepper
¼ teaspoon salt
6 artichokes, prepared as directed

Blend mayonnaise, lemon juice, mustard, pepper and salt. Serve as dip with hot or chilled artichokes.

Indira Gives Rights Pitch

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi of India told women from 25 countries Wednesday that women the world over "continue to be economically dependent and victims of customs and traditions."

Despite impressive victories in the battle for political and economic equality, women found that the equality that was legally extended to them was withheld in practice in subtle ways, the 56-year-old prime minister said.

She was inaugurating the 23rd triennial congress of the International Alliance of Women.

Gandhi asked women to assert their rights and said: "I view the fight of women for greater social and political rights as part of the fight of groups which have historically been oppressed for their due share of freedom and opportunity."

India's history, Gandhi said, is full of great women philosophers, scientists and rulers.

Shield Blocks Study

BADEN-BADEN, Germany (UPI) — A West German researcher says science is still trying to break through the "protective shield" surrounding tumorous cells as part of the worldwide fight against cancer.

Dr. Hans Nieper told fellow research workers at the International Cancer Congress the shield has been hampering efforts to detect such cells in humans.

About 500 scientists from around the world — including the United States, Canada, France, Britain, South Africa and China — attended the two-day congress in this Black Forest resort in southern Germany.

Nieper, president of the congress, told his colleagues that research work has shown there are certain substances entering only tumorous cells, acting as inhibition agents inside.

Nieper said the human organism's power of resistance against tumorous growths is considerably greater than previously believed.

Other researchers told the congress experiments show it may be possible to prevent the beginning of cancerous growths once the "protective shield" surrounding the tumor's cells has been penetrated.

Some experts told the congress drug therapy in the fight against cancer has entered a dead-end road and that surgery and X-ray treatment have reached a stage where "further progress appears unlikely."

Other researchers said drugs developed and manufactured in the fight against the disease appear to contain "too many poisonous ingredients."

Some of them said they believed previous therapy placed too much emphasis on cancer being a localized disease rather than involving the entire organism.

The congress also heard a report by Dr. Lloyd Schloen of New York, a member of the Sloan-Kettering Institute, on the controversial drug laetrile. The drug's manufacture and use is prohibited in the United States.

"We are still evaluating the drug and I think that the evaluation process will still be going on for some time," Schloen said.

Mom, Daughter Join the Army

CARSON CITY, Nev. (UPI) — The Nevada U.S. Army National Guard has recruited Mrs. Patricia Folan and her daughter, Kathy, to serve in its unit here. The mother had been a sergeant with the marines from 1951 to 1954.

Mrs. Folan said, "I really enjoyed the service when I was in before and I hadn't wanted to leave. I did so only because, at that time, you had to when you got married."

She will get her sergeant's rank back and be trained as a teletype operator. Kathy, after completing basic training, will attend a teletype course at Ft. Gordon, Ga.

'Crib-O-Gram' Finds Hearing Loss Early

STANFORD, Calif., (UPI) — Hearing defects in children may be reduced by a new device that can detect hearing loss before a baby is one year old.

The device, called the "Crib-O-Gram," was developed by Dr. F. Blair Simmons, head of the division of otolaryngology at the Stanford University School of Medicine.

Over the past three years, he said, 180,000 tests using the device have been administered to 6,000 babies in Stanford hospital nurseries. He said eight babies who failed the test at birth were found by additional testing at the age of six months to have hearing losses, thus allowing the babies to undergo early treatment for better chance of cure.

Simmons' work, assisted by research assistant Frederica Russ, was supported by a grant from the National Institute of Neurological Diseases and stroke of the national institutes of health in Bethesda, Md.

According to Simmons, hearing rehabilitation is most successful if it is begun around six months of age, yet hearing defects in very few children are discovered before they are one. In fact, he said, most problems are not detected until children are two or three, when their language development falters.

Simmons explained the heart of the automatic system is an inexpensive motion detector called a transducer, originally developed to register the fuel load in aircraft by the amount of weight stress on the wing supports. When mounted on the crib, it detects the stress caused by movement in the crib.

The device monitors motion with a test sound emitted from a microphone in the ceiling of the nursery. Simmons said it is "simply a matter of determining whether there has been a change in crib activity after a test sound."

He said test results are scored according to criteria for passing and failing developed through a control study of 5,000 babies in the Stanford nurseries.

He said there have been no reports of deafness among the babies who passed the test, accounting for 36 per cent of all tested. A total of 327 babies who failed the Crib-O-Gram were subjected to futher screening at six months, and eight of them were found to have hearing defects, he said.

The incidence of deafness in newborns is one or two per thousand, and since it is a relatively small ratio, nursery staff or pediatricians do not always feel it is worth their time to screen every infant individually, Simmons said.

"With the Crib-O-Gram, little extra time or effort is involved," Simmons explained. "Everything can be mechanized, and the average cost is 85 cents per child."

Second Book for Maltz

NEW YORK (AP) — As a plastic surgeon, Dr. Maxwell Maltz discovered that although he could make people look great on the outside, they often still felt terrible on the inside.

"Even though I would get marvelous results, the patients wouldn't be happy. I wondered what it was all about. It puzzled me."

That questioning turned Maltz to working not just to repair the flesh but to restore the spirit.

"It opened up a whole new horizon to me," he says. "I came to realize that the inner scars were far more disabling to more people but that they could remove them with a little compassion and respect for themselves."

Acting on that premise, based on religious concepts of the divine value of each individual, Maltz has built up a widespread extra-professional practice of teaching inner improvement through awareness of the "Godlike quality in self."

"It's a spiritual thing," he said in an interview. "It's not a new religion or a cult, but the active application of fundamental principles that sustain our sense of worth and dignity."

Maltz' method for doing it — now used in numerous programs in industry, universities and churches — first was detailed in a 1959 book, Psycho-Cybernetics, and is elaborated in a new Grosset and Dunlap volume, The Search for Self-Respect.

He also teaches his system through recordings and tape cassettes, and spends about half of each year on the road, giving about 150 lectures annually, while two assistants keep up his plastic surgery practice. Over the years, Psycho-Cybernetics has sold 13 milliuon copies, and still sells at the rate of 2,000 a day.

'Is That Allowed?'

TORONTO (CP) — Edith Asboth, the Toronto Transit Commission's first woman driver, says she likes the job but it's a tough one. She doesn't think many women will want to take it on.

Mrs. Asboth enjoys working with the men, and the easy banter and kidding at the barns before it's time to go out. She also enjoys driving on different runs because they all have their own special features.

Probably her most colorful run so far is the one along Main and Parliament Streets, Mrs. Asboth says. Between 5 p.m. and 2:30 a.m. on a Friday you get all the drunks. However, they have all been good-natured.

"On Main Street there are the little old ladies — my God, there are bingo games going on there."

"Many people say: 'Isn't that wonderful,' when they see a woman bus driver. Sometimes a man will say: 'Is that allowed?' "

When she is on a new run and gets lost, Mrs. Asboth just asks the passengers. "If you do go the wrong way they will tell you; everybody gets up."

Mrs. Asboth, who has lost six pounds since starting her new job, won't be going on the street cars or trolleys because she wasn't able to handle the trolley poles when they slipped off the overhead wires.

Her qualifications for the job are impressive. She has been teaching driver training for seven years for the Ontario Safety League and the department of education and she has taught a rugged driving course to police officers.

SENATOR BLASTS LOSS OF APPEAL

TORONTO (CP) — The case of Irene Murdoch of Nanton Alta., who lost an appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada for a half interest in the family farm from her estranged husband, was described Tuesday by Senator Joan Neiman as a blatant example that man is lord and woman is servant.

Neiman said the Supreme Court decision in October "must have given all thoughtful women and men pause to reflect on the inequities, the injustices and the patently ridiculous anachronisms of present laws in Canada pertaining to the family and its preservation."

The Liberal senator said the important issue is whether a wife, who for more than 25 years contributes physical labor and financial assistance to the acquisition of family assets, "is entitled to anything more than her walking papers when the parties separate."

In handing down the decision, the Supreme Court ruled that Murdoch was not entitled to a property settlement as she had contributed "only a normal contribution as wife to the matrimonial regime."

Senator Neiman said, it is this kind of manoeuvre "to maintain the status quo, or the status anti-quo, that frustrates us all. If we are not all angry now, I think we should be."

Senator Neiman was speaking to the Liberal Women's Tuesday Luncheon Club.

Firsthand Seat For Smith

LONDON (AP) — Village blacksmith Bert Tidmarsh will be in Westminster Abbey next week to watch the wedding of Princess Anne.

But foreign ambassadors will have to find out about the ceremony secondhand as far as is known.

The guest list of 1,500 for the Nov. 14 marriage of Queen Elizabeth's only daughter to Capt. Mark Phillips has provoked some dismay among the diplomatic corps.

Only Commonwealth countries have been invited to send their official representatives. Even they were not on the original list, some sources say.

Many on the list live in the tiny Wiltshire villages around Great Somerford, Phillips' home town in western England. Among them is Tidmarsh, 61, who shoes horses for the Phillips family.

He and his wife get Abbey places. So do saddler David Barnes and his wife. They made the official guest list at the expense of some of the most distinguished members of the London diplomatic corps, since the decision was taken not to invite any official foreign representatives.

Buckingham Palace said the intention is to try to make the wedding an occasion for family and friends.

North Saanich

SHERWOOD

North Saanich residents will be faced with numerous decisions Nov. 17 with three mayoralty candidates and seven people seeking aldermanic terms.

Ald. Nel Horth, seeking re-election to a one-year term, is the only incumbent. There are three two-year terms and one one-year term open.

Following is a list of the candidates and their platforms.

FOR MAYOR

Grieve, Paul J. G., 634 Lands End Rd., construction company president.

During his two-year term as alderman, Grieve was chairman of finance and public works committees. He believes "this year's increase in taxes was unnecessary and must not be repeated."

"Priorities must be rearranged to permit an increase in parkland acquisition. Dean Park especially, needs an adequate children's playfield," said Grieve, "I would encourage farming on small holdings, by making the qualifications for farm taxes clear and simple."

Boon, Douglas J., 832 Downey, retired.

"On the request of a large number of taxpayers I resigned in the middle of my second aldermanic term to run for the office of mayor," said Boon, "Should I be elected I would endeavor, among other important matters, to get council's support in enabling non-elected persons to serve on standing committees, and, make participatory democracy the basis of this council's operations."

"The need for an improved water supply is imperative, and unless senior governments are prepared to underwrite some fifty per cent of the cost of a new main then we must develop our own subsurface water resources," he said.

Philp, Owen B., 10202 McDonald Park, retired.

"A well-thought out organized development plan is necessary that will maintain residential, commercial and farming interests in controlled development," said Philp, who supports amalgamation with Sidney.

"Taxes should be kept to the minimum necessary for administration, maintenance and improvement costs," he said adding "present procedures and water tax policies are questionable and need to be investigated."

For Two-Year Aldermanic Terms

Sherwood, Eric, 1968 McTavish, owner electronics repair service.

Sherwood ran unsuccessfully in the 1971 aldermanic elections and also as NDP candidate for Saanich and the Islands in the 1972 provincial elections.

He supports better co-ordination of the activities of municipal and provincial works departments and more consultation and co-operation with Saanich school board for maximum public use of facilities.

Price, Wilfred D., 8520 Ebor, business manager lumber company.

"I believe in careful budgeting, ever mindful of retaining adequate reserves for efecient operation and progress," said Price, "I will encourage a positive approach to developing more recreational opportunities from our many available resources.

"I will emphatically oppose amalgamation by legislation and favor the voice of the people to decide this matter," he said.

Chaney, Lon, 8569 East Saanich, land representative.

"There is a need for a broader based representation in the area," said Chaney, "Planned development is a priority instead of the hit and miss methods used to date. Keep North Saanich rural as long as possible."

Cumming, James B., 1780 Lands End, retired.

Former North Saanich mayor Cumming aims to "continue tight development and control of subdivision to the benefit of our community and projection of our desire to retain our rural aspect and atmosphere."

"We have a 'plan for North Saanich' which we use for guidance. It is due to be updated," said Cumming. "We are fortunate in having a highly qualified technical planning staff at the Regional Board to call upon for expert advice. Their abilities, plus our own staff and the elected council with their local knowledge, provide a well-proven mechanism to make planning decisions."

Lapham, John, 540 Downey, electrical contractor.

Lapham is concerned with "the lack of consideration given by past councils to the environmental and social impact on the community of major zoning changes and public works projects."

He also questions "parochialism and the low level of co-operation with other municipalities and the allocating of monies for unnecessary public works projects."

For One-Year Terms

Horth, Nell, 10837 Deep Cove, housewife.

With a "keen interest in the future of North Saanich," Horth's policy "is simply that of responsible government with a minimum tax structure without endangering essential services, and a continuation of her efforts to serve the best interests of the whole community."

Hartmanshenn, Herta, 11060 West Saanich, UVic professor.

As her platform Dr. Hartmanshenn would seek "full co-operation with neighboring municipalities in matters of common concern — recreation, hiking and bicycle trails, beach access, water supply for domestic and agricultural use must replace narrow-minded and selfish parochialism."

Xaviera 'Researching'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Xaviera Hollander — The Happy Hooker—claimed Wednesday in provincial court that she was collecting material for a book—not shoplifting—when she took three nightgowns from the Bay June 8.

The best-selling author pleaded not guilty to taking the three nightdresses valued at $48 as her trial opened here.

Store security officer Elsie Yakowchuk testified she and another security officer stopped Miss Hollander outside the store and found the three nighties.

Mrs. Yakowchuk said when they stopped Miss Hollander she told them, "You've got to be kidding—do you know who I am?"

Store security manager Owen O'Dell said Miss Hollander asked him not to involve the police.

He said she offered to pay double the cost of the merchandise and was carrying about $135 at the time.

Police Constable Ken Kilpatrick said he specifically asked her if she meant to steal the articles and she replied: "Yes."

Provincial court Judge Darrell Jones remanded the case to Dec. 3.

Imported Pesticides Feared

VANCOUVER (CP) — Foreign imports at higher prices — with chemical content unknown — would be the result of unreasonable restrictions on the use of pesticides in the Fraser Valley.

This contention was made in a brief to British Columbia's Royal Commission into the Use of Pesticides and Herbicides.

The brief was presented by Maria Friesen of Sardis on behalf of the Fraser Valley Fruit and Vegetable growers Association.

The commission should keep in mind, she said, that pesticides and herbicides are used in the production of large amounts of imported food products.

"If B.C. growers are forced out of production and we must rely on imports, then we are at the mercy of suppliers from other countries," Mrs. Friesen said. "And that includes price, quality, and chemicals."

Docker Raps Canadian Fleet Plan

VANCOUVER (CP) — Lou Kaufman, president of the Vancouver local of the Longshoreman's Union, said Wednesday the setting up of a Canadian merchant marine wouldn't help Vancouver regain general cargo traffic that has been lost to Seattle.

"The setting up of a Canadian merchant marine would be more of a sop to sentiment than a realistic step at a time when foreign operators of container vessels are operating so much in the red," he said.

A Canadian fleet would be no guarantee that traffic would be returned to Vancouver, so long as existing shipping lines serving Seattle could avail themselves of preferential trucking and railway rates to move their caroges into Canada, he added.

Kaufman gave his views after the longshoremen had received letters from several New Democratic Party MPs supporting the idea of a Canadian fleet.

Uncle Ben Pulls Out

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ben Ginter said Wednesday night that he will close his new brewery in Red Deer, Alta., tolay and ask the Alberta government to take it over at cost.

He said he would re-open on his own only if he were allowed to market his products in accordance with the free enterprise system, "without hassle from government and labor."

Ginter, who started out as a bulldozer operator in Prince George, said the decision Wednesday by the Alberta cabinet to ban the sale of soft drinks in beer bottles was the "final chapter in a whole book of trouble" in Alberta.

Uncle Ben's Brewery (Alta.) Ltd. was ready for production 13 months ago but to date has turned out nothing stronger than ginger ale.

A series of labor problems, capped by a call from the Alberta Federation of Labor for a boycott of Uncle Ben's products, have kept the brewery part of the Red Deer plant idle.

Ginter said investment in Red Deer is about $4 million, and the government could have the plant and supplies for this sum. "They're welcome to audit the books," he said. "I'll be happy to get out at cost."

He said the immediate effect of the ban of soft drinks in beer bottles will be that 45 people in Red Deer will lose their jobs.

Tre Conservative government of Peter Lougheed was bowing to big business, Ginter added.

"The sooner the NDP takes over, the better," said the millionaire. "Only then will the average man have a voice."

National Office

VANCOUVER (CP) — William McLeman, 41, executive secretary of the Vancouver and New Westminster Newspaper Guild, Local 115, will become Canadian director of The Newspaper Guild starting Dec. 1.

The guild with headquarters in Ottawa has about 3,000 Canadian members. McLeman is in his 10th year as executive secretary of the 930-member coast local.

TARGET: MOONSHINERS

TORONTO (CP) — The RCMP has added an extra couple of men to their four-man, anti-moonshine squad with hopes of finding pre-Christmas stills that traditionally get busy at this time of year in Metropolitan Toronto.

Cpl. Lee McKergow, head of the RCMP anti-moonshine squad, said Wednesday he'd like a repeat of the success the squad had this time last year when it made 43 seizures of either stills or bottled moonshine in 10 days.

He said moonshine production increases as Christmas approaches when pressed grapes for the mash from which illicit alcohol is most frequently made are easily available.

Making wine isn't an offence but making moonshine is, he said. Home-made wine is covered by provincial legislation which allows up to 100 gallons for every adult in a house.

"We're not after the wine," Cpl. McKergow said. "We're after moonshine, which is illegally-manufactured alcohol or what we call illicit spirits."

He said the federal government loses an estimated $25 in excise taxes on every gallon of moonshine, depending on how much it is "cut" or diluted with water or flavoring before it is sold.

Bikes, Boats Go Together

Motorcycles and sailboats don't seem to go together.

But groups of motorcyclists and sea cadets will be working hand in hand Sunday with a common aim: to boost funds.

The bikers are members of Victoria Motorcycle Club, which has agreed to give half the money collected at its annual charity race Sunday to the financially-troubled Rainbow Sea Cadets.

And the Rainbow organization will play its part when 20 uniformed cadets and wrenettes collect donations from the crowd at Juan de Fuca Recreation Centre track behind Centennial Pool.

Actually, the Rainbow Cadets aren't quite so financially troubled as they were a few weeks ago.

Then, their funds were down to zero. But the recent walkathon raised $7,500 and a delivery by cadets of 83,000 sawdust logs to homes in Greater Victoria boosted this to about $11,000.

However, the Sea Cadets' operating budget for a year is between $10,000 and $11,000 and, as one official pointed out, nothing would be left for things like purchase of new sailboats and for minor repairs.

Victoria Motorcycle Club, which has 100 members, was incorporated in 1927 and is the oldest competitive motorcycle club in Canada.

A total of 40 riders of all classes will take part in the events, starting at 1 p.m.

How to choose toys for little girls

Because each little girl has her own special personality, we hope that these guidelines will help you select the right toys for your special little girl.

WHEN YOU SHOP

Remember that the toy you buy for your little girl is for her at her age. Toys too complicated for a child can cause frustration, not happy play, no matter how much you personally may be attracted to them.

Remember that every girl needs a variety of toys to stimulate her growth, so keep in mind what types of dolls or toys your girl already has before you shop.

One more word — in a child's world, yesterday's favourite toy is forgotten today to fall back into favour tomorrow. So don't you be discouraged if every purchase isn't received with instant glee. Time will tell. And tell again.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

What makes a jack-knife a weapon dangerous to the public peace?

Intent, says the court; and in Victoria provincial court Wednesday it led Judge William Ostler to convict a 17-year-old youth.

Frederick William Mitchell, 1133 Fort, had been charged Aug. 27 after police searched him in the 700 block Yates and found in his pocket a knife with a four-inch blade.

Mitchell told police he carried it "for protection against queers."

Police charged him with carrying a weapon dangerous to the public peace.

Ostler said intent or purpose was the critical aspect of the charge as it implied the weapon would be used if the occasion arose and that indeed the accused must have anticipated such an occasion would arise.

"It's not necessary to carry knives for protection against queers," Ostler said. "Usually such people can be repulsed. There are lawful ways of dealing with such unsavory characters."

But Ostler, turning to defence lawyer Mike Hutchison, said: "I don't intend to punish this man. He was very foolish . . . he made a mistake, an error in judgment in having the knife on him."

He said he would grant a discharge on the condition Mitchell doesn't carry or possess a knife for the next six months.

Remarked Ostler: "The business of carrying knives . . . is to be deplored. It is illegal and it is dangerous."

A youth whom Ostler said was an example of how young people are made to suffer because of parental difficulties was placed on 18 months probation for public mischief.

Michael Kim Jones, 17, of 4814 Townsend, had been charged after he phoned Saanich police Sept. 29 to tell them someone had stolen a car when in fact he had taken it himself and had rolled it over on Beaver Lake Road.

Ostler noted the youth had come from a broken home and had been "passed from hand to hand" among members of his family.

"It is no wonder he has no feeling of security. The boy has had no chance to develop as a young man should.

"But all in all," he said, "he hasn't done too badly considering the lack of guidance and family cohesion."

Guy Patrick Copley, 18 Phillion Place, was fined $100 when he pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana.

Copley, 21, was charged after police stopped him at Yates and Fernwood Monday and found a plastic bag containing one ounce of marijuana in his jacket pocket.

His arrest came shortly after he was seen enter, then leave a house on Johnson Street being watched by undercover drug agents.

Pcific Coast Beauty Salon Ltd., 1070 Douglas, was fined $200 and company president Nicholas Smylitopoulas was fined $250 when both pleaded guilty to a violation of the Income Tax Act.

They failed to remit $264.45 deducted or withheld from employee's wages for tax purposes June 15.

Kim Rene Allan Zigay, 18, of Otter Point Road, was fined $350 and prohibited from driving for three months when he pleaded guilty to impaired driving.

The youth was charged after RCMP investigated a three-car accident on Otter Point Road Oct. 28.

Bus Drivers Back, Set to Brake

MONTREAL (CP) — The city's 3,200 bus drivers and subway operators returned to work Wednesday night, but are expected to stage another 24-hour study session Sunday, again bringing public transportation to a halt.

The transit workers, who spent most of Wednesday in meetings while most Montrealers hitch-hiked or got caught in massive traffic snarls, voted 906 to 504 to turn down a tentative contract agreement reached Monday night between company and union negotiators.

They later approved the return to work in a show of hands vote.

A spokesman for the Montreal Urban Community Transit Commission said 90 per cent of the city's 150 bus lines resumed service at 10:30 p.m. Wednesday while the subway system's three main lines were in operation shortly after midnight.

The rejected cntract would have given the men a 27.3 per cent wage increase during a 30-month contract. This would have increased the average hourly wage to $5.05 from $4.15 and the average weekly wage to $220 from $166 by July, 1975.

The men are asking for a one-year contract to replace their last agreement which expired Jan. 1.

1107 GOVERNMENT STREET DOWNTOWN

3rd VIETNAM WAR ON SAIGON DECLARES

SAIGON (UPI) — The Saigon government said today a recent upsurge in fighting across the country, with three bases falling to the Communists in less than a week, marked the start of the third Vietnam war.

Bui Bao Truc, the government spokesman, told a news conference an estimated 400,000 North Vietnamese soldiers in the south were responsible for the latest battles.

"The third war has indeed started in South Vietnam," Truc said. "From small attacks to which nobody paid attention, the Communists will launch bigger and bigger operations."

The first Vietnam war, with French participation, lasted from 1945 to 1954. The second conflict, involving the U.S., went from 1961 to 1973.

"If they launch a big offensive — the negotiations can break up," Truc said.

Government and Communist negotiators have accomplished little so far at the Paris talks, which began last winter under terms of the Jan. 28 cease-fire agreement.

The Viet Cong said today 32 persons were killed and 167 houses destroyed in South Vietnamese bombing raids on two Viet Cong towns Wednesday.

A Viet Cong spokesman also told reporters by telephone from the Viet Cong compound here 70 persons were wounded in a four-hour daylight strike at Loc Ninh and Bo Duc.

Meanwhile, 400 South Vietnamese soldiers driven from their bases along the Cambodian border straggled back to safety as the North Vietnamese kept up a campaign military observers said is designed to open a new supply corridor down South Vietnam's western border.

Washington analysts believe intensified Communist attacks are aimed primarily at seizing the important rice crop.

Across the border, terrorist activities have stepped up in Cambodia where the military command conceded more than 1,000 government soldiers and civilians had abandoned the besieged town of Srang, 26 miles southwest of Phnom Penh, Tuesday.

New Typhoid Strain Beats the Drugs

LONDON (Guardian) — Typhoid fever resistant to Chloramphenicol —the only drug important in its treatment — has now emerged in Vietnam, says a report in the Lancet, a British medical journal.

As feared by public health authorities in Britain and, later, other parts of the world, resistant types of the typhoid organism are now epidemic throughout the world. With a higher death rate than the normal organism, an epidemic caused by a resistant type occurred in Mexico in 1972 — resulting in some 10,000 cases and still going on — and smaller outbreaks have also occurred in India, Chile and Europe.

The cases reported in Vietnam involve several different types of organism of which four types are resistant not only to Chloramphenical but to Tertrocycline, Sulphonamide and Streptomycin. Other types are resistant to Chloramphenicol and two additional drugs.

All the types of typhoid organism isolated from the Vietnam epidemic appear to be capable of passing their resistance pattern to other organisms through what is called an R factor — a rapid means of cross transmission similar to the inefective transmission of disease-causing organisms from one person to another.

Marlene in the Pink

WASHINGTON (WP) — Marlene Dietrich fell off the revolving stage of the Shady Grove Music Fair Wednesday night — just after finishing a rendition of Falling in Love Again.

The 72-year-old singer had been reaching over to shake hands with her conductor after receiving a standing ovation for her evening of nostalgic songs.

She said she was not hurt. "I've been through two wars and on battle fields and I have the congressional medal of honor," she told the theatre management. "It would take more than a fall in the pit."

Nevertheless, she was extremely agitated when members of her staff tried to lift her back on the stage.

The problem was that her dress — a typically Dietrich affair of sequins sewn suggestively onto flesh colored net — had split. Even though someone threw a coat over her shoulders, she refused to leave the orchestra pit while members of the audience stood around in shocked silence, gaping.

For awhile she tried smiling and waving goodbye, then she turned to snapping out the command, "everybody go home." Finally, when ushers had driven people up the aisles, she agreed to emerge.

No decision was made as to whether Thursday's performance would be cancelled."

LEGAL LANGUAGE WRONG TONGUE

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — The chaplain at the University of Moncton says he knows the city police have a warrant for his arrest but he won't respect it if it is in English.

Rev. Sylvio Doiron said police officials have told him the warrant, issued on a charge of failing to stop a motor vehicle at a city stop sign, is written in English but has no day or time for serving on it.

The chaplain of the French-language university said Tuesday he would resist attempts to serve an English-only warrant "because they are not respecting my rights in an officially bilingual country."

Moncton Police Chief C. M. Weldon said the warrant was only in English and added that it might be acted upon, "possibly soon."

The case began in September when Father Doiron received a summons on the charge and went to the police station to pay the fine "on condition that the police gave me a paper in French explaining the infraction."

The summons, he said, had been written in English and "I was received arrogantly and they showed me to the door."

Week to Go, Mark Queasy

LONDON — Capt. Mark Phillips was sick and confined to bed at Buckingham Palace Wednesday, just one week before his wedding to Princess Anne. A palace spokesman said he has "a slight stomach upset — it's nothing much."

WASHINGTON — A Canadian-born veteran of the United States Secret Service was named Wednesday as new director of the agency that protects American presidents and foreign dignitaries.

The appointment of H. Stuart Knight, 52, a dynamic figure, climaxed a series of shifts in the 2,800-member Secret Service which began last winter with an apparent clash between President Nixon's senior aides and the protective agency.

In naming Knight, who had been assistant director of administration for 2½ years, Treasury Secretary George Shultz passed over four other assistant directors regarded as more senior, as well as the agency's deputy director, Lilburn Boggs, 52.

TORONTO — Tim Ryan, a singer and songwriter from Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., flies to Tokyo Friday to represent Canada in this year's world popular song festival. Ryan, the only Canadian participating in the three-day festival, is among 33 semi-finalists selected from 850 entries.

MIAMI — Business associates say Howard Hughes may soon move into the Miami home he purchased from his millionaire friend George Davis — while closing a financial deal with Davis' development firm.

Rumors Wednesday that Hughes himself was in Miami died down when clues dropped by Davis' staff pointed to a Davis-Hughes meeting, perhaps later today, at the international monetary bank on British Grand Cayman Island in the Caribbean.

POCATELLO, Idaho — Two women have been arrested on charges of selling bootleg liquor made from vodka, water and urine.

State investigators said Edna Collins, 54, and Tiny Gibson Ward, 45, both of Pocatello, sold the mixture as bourbon.

WATERVILLE, Me. — Katharine Graham, publisher of the Washington Post, has been named by Colby College as the recipient of its 1973 Elijah Parish Lovejoy award for journalistic achievement, the college announced Wednesday. Mrs. Graham will speak at a college convocation here next March 20.

HOUNSLOW, England — The head teacher at an 800-pupil comprehensive school Wednesday advised his teachers to get another job — as bus conductors.

Hugh Scott said trainee teachers could expect to begin teaching at $45 a week under the government's anti-inflation program.

"They'd be better off working as bus conductors — they'd get double their present income," Scott, headmaster of Heston School, Hounslow, said at the school speech day.

OTTAWA — Lieutenant-governors and their wives from across the country, including Walter Owen of B.C., attended a final get-together with Governor-General Roland Michener and Mrs. Michener Wednesday. Michener retires in January.

WOOD'S OLD NAVY

MESSAGES FLUTTER

APPLEDOR, England (UPI) — Rev. Donald Peyton-Jones was concerned about the spiritual isolation of 35 members of his congregation living on phoneless Lunday Island 24 miles out in the storm lashed Bristol Channel.

There was no way the Lundy Islanders could get news back to the Devonshire mainland for publication in the parish magazine until Peyton-Jones introduced his carrier pigeon service.

So far he has conducted four experimental flights. Bird No. 1 arrived with a message from his wife: Bird No. 2 and No. 3 both arrived safely from the island but lost their messages en route, and bird No. 4, faced with rough weather, was found four days later still on Lundy sheltering behind some rocks.

Garden Vegetables Far From 'Finished'

Don't let anyone tell you beginning gardeners that your vegetables are "finished" for the year — not if you sowed and planted as advised here in the past six months.

The kinds of vegetables which normally stay in the ground in this area are not even slightly harmed by the few degrees of frost and a few inches of snow.

On the contrary, dig up a couple of good sized leeks and make a beautiful leek pie. You'll find they have a finer flavor now than a root you may have tried a month ago.

Since they are so deep in the soil, you need to use a garden fork to get them out or you may end up with just a handful of green tops. Use some of the green at the lower end of the leaves — it adds color and flavor to your dish.

Parsnips too are much more palatable now after frost. They too need lifting with a fork. Having enough on hand for a week ensures that you use your own produce instead of taking the easier way out when soil is very wet, and buying a supply.

Wipe the roots with a soft damp cloth to bring indoors. Don't wash thoroughly until ready to use. Store in plastic bag in vegetable bin of refrigerator.

A late sowing of beets will have survived in gardens almost free of frost — those near salt water, on a southern sheltered slope or in a protected coldframe and should be pulled up now as needed. Cook the youngest of the leaves with the small beets. Old leaves will be tough but can always be added to soups which are to be strained.

Carrots, unless a very late sowing, should be used steadily before possible root maggot (the larva from the carrot-rust fly) creeps throughout the roots. This happens sometimes event though the crop has been entirely clean all summer and fall .

Also, carrots will split when left in wet ground after they reach full size for the variety grown.

You will have winter spinach quite unharmed by frost. Take a few leaves from each plant, never stripping one plant or it fails to grow more. A loose dry sack over the plants if severe frost is likely, will protect this leafy vegetable so much needed fresh in winter.

Moss curled kale doesn't even recognize frost, so when this is grown you have a constant winter supply. Again, take a few of the younger (not youngest) leaves from each plant each picking.

Green sprouting broccoli surprises me each year because it really begins to grow its little bud heads after cool weather.

Don't waste one of them. Cut and use before they begin to open. Eat them cooked or raw, for this vegetable rates at the top of the winter vegetable list for food value.

Grow brocolli in a deep enough coldframe with a glass cover against the worst of winter weather, and we might all become Tarzans and Amazons on our winter diets.

SOLUTION FRIDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

There is nothing more frustrating in bridge than coming up with the right line of play and losing because on that particular day the fates were against you. Such is the story of today's deal.

The hand arose in a National Championship Team-of-Four match. Sitting South was the late Walter Malowan, of New York City.

North-South vulnerable. South deals.

♣ K 7

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♣	2 ◇
2 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Five of ◇.

Against the three notrump contract West dutifully opened his singleton diamond in response to partner's overcall, Malowan winning the trick with his ace. He then cashed the ace, king, and queen of spades, each of the opponents following suit to the first three leads of that suit, and each discarding a heart on the fourth spade.

From the outset, the foremost thought in declarer's mind was the question of how he was going to play the club suit, and he was trying to get a "count" of the opponents' cards to help him resolve that question. This is the path that his thinking took:

"East, for his two diamond overcall, obviously has five diamonds. He has followed suit to three spade leads and has discarded a heart. I know nine of his original cards. Four are unknown to me.

"West has been observed to possess one diamond, three spades, and one heart. Hence, eight of his cards are unknown to me.

"If I took the opponents' twelve unknown cards and shuffled them up, giving eight to West and four to East, into whose hand would the jack of clubs figure to fall? By two to one odds (eight to four) the knave would fall into the West hand."

On this mathematical logic, at trick six Malowan led dummy's five of clubs to his king, after which he returned his remaining club and finessed the board's ten-spot. The roof then proceeded to cave in. When the defenders got through cashing their winners, Malowan was three tricks short of his contract.

Declarer was right in his conclusion — West had four clubs and East had but two. By all rights West should have had the club jack, and he would have had it two days out of three. Today, for Malowan, it was the third day.

GOLDWATER BELIEVES IN UFOs

ELLENSBURG, Wash. (AP) — Senator Barry Goldwater, a retired U.S. Air Force general, says he believes the earth has been visited by creatures from outer space.

"I've been flying now for 44 years, and I'm the last guy that's going to say I don't believe they're up there," the Arizona Republican said during a question-and-answer session following a speech at Central Washington State College.

"I've never seen one," Goldwater said. "But when air force pilots, navy pilots, airline pilots tell me they see something come up on their wing that wasn't an airplane, I have to belive them."

The Royal Alexandra
Announcing the beginning of the end
The last self-owned apartments on Beach Drive

Frankly, when we started we never expected to be able to build such an exceptional apartment featuring such spacious and luxuriously appointed rooms throughout, still provide a planned recreation complex that has its own sauna room, exercise pavilion, therapeutic pool, hobby room, freezer room and underground electronically secured parking.
Naturally, the location and setting here on Beach Drive can never be replaced. This is your year 'round view.
Close to the world-famous Oak Bay Marina and Restaurant, a constant parade of graceful yachts and cruisers, lovely Windsor Park, rose gardens and just about anything else you would want at the Oak Bay Village.
As we say . . . each apartment is larger and more luxuriously appointed than you would expect at these prices.
If you've ever wanted a place in Oak Bay now is the time to get it before they're all gone.

Academy Guidance Sought

Oak Bay's zoning committee today recommended amendments to a proposed bylaw designed to protect the 9.38-acre Victoria Riding Academy site from constant "pressure and clamor" for highrise development.

Committee chairman Ald. Brian Smith suggested advice be sought from municipal solicitor Marsh Gordon before the amended bylaw is presented to council for third reading.

After a public hearing on the bylaw Monday, Gordon said amendments recommended by aldermen at that time were too "substantial" for it to pass without another public hearing.

The original belaw was to zone a "recreation-club" area specifically for riding with off-street parking for club members.

The committee recommended the words "club zone" and "riding academy" to deleted and off-street parking be provided for non-members.

At the hearing one speaker quoted a news story which said academy manager Don Carley intended to make $50,000 renovations if the municipality granted him a long-term lease. Carley was not at the hearing but did attend today's meeting.

Smith explained to Carley and his wife that "in turning down the sale of that land (to the provincial government), it follows that the majority of council want you to stay but not to make any major investments."

If given a lease "you may be in more trouble than it's worth" because they would be obligated to pay a "minimum" of $4,400 taxes a year, said Smith.

"I'm putting it to you that a lease is probably not in your best interests. It would be quite a bite in taxes for the academy," said Smith adding it would be more economical for the Carley's to continue operating on a month-to-month basis.

"We don't need any more hardships," said Mrs. Carley who told the committee she and her husband had been in the business since 1923 and operated on the Cedar Hill Crossroad site 24 years.

Asked what repairs were necessary Carley replied, "It all wants repairing."

Carley cited, in particular, the need for a new fence between the academy land and Uplands Golf course.

Oak Bay's engineer-planner Geoff White was asked to look into drainage problems pointed out by the Carleys.

Carley said there are about 300 members, "mostly children," and there are still enough trails in the area to take a 14-mile ride to Mount Douglas Park where riding on the beach is permitted during the winter.

After the Carleys left Smith said the proposed amendments would broaden the zoning to include the academy but would not exclude other types of recreation.

Municipal administrator Ted Hart was asked to redraft the bylaw and a zoning committee meeting was tentatively set for Nov. 15 for further discussion before taking the amended version to full council.

Nanaimo Bank Robbed

The main branch of the Bank of Montreal in Nanaimo was robbed this morning by a scruffily dressed youth whom RCMP described as a "hippie type".

Police said the youth, age about 20, went into the bank on Terminal Avenue at 10:40 a.m. and handed a teller a note demanding money.

A bank spokesman said the youth appeared to be armed though it is not confirmed by police.

After receiving an undisclosed amount of cash from the teller, the youth fled on foot.

Police started a massive search but as of noon today have no suspects.

United Way Totalled

There's a lot of arithmetic involved in a six-week fund-raising campaign and United Way volunteers are spending this week totalling the donations, chairman Murray Glazier said Wednesday.

The campaign ended Nov. 5 and a final announcement on its success will be made following a meeting today, said Glazier.

The campaigners are aiming for $680,000, he said, and last Monday's deadline will not be extended.

School Split Urged

The newly-amalgamated Belmont - Fisher secondary school in Langford has become an issue for Sooke school board candidates.

Joining of Belmont senior and Elizabeth Fisher junior secondary schools was a catastrophe, Noel Haas, school board candidate for Belmont area, said at an all-candidates meeting Wednesday.

"The truancy rate at the school now is very high," she said. "The morale is appalling."

Mrs. Haas said the two schools should be split again, after Christmas if possible or at least by next fall.

School board chairman Fred Willway, who is not running for re-election, told the meeting the two schools were amalgamated when Belmont principal Wally Russell resigned and there wasn't time to get a new principal.

Russell resigned just a few days before the end of term to become principal-designate of Saanich community school, Willway said today.

Elizabeth Fisher principal John Holt was then made principal of the combined school, which has 1,657 students.

Belmont-Fisher Grade 12 student Ken Strandell said today students are "really down" over the amalgamation. Both schools used to have great school spirit and that's gone, he said.

"We're just missing what we had," Strandell said. "A lot of kids' marks are suffering because of this, I think."

At the meeting school board candidate Brian Killip said the schools should be separated again, but to try and do it in the middle of the year wouldn't be wise.

CFAX Plans Move Into FM

Radio Station CFAX announced plans Wednesday to move into the FM broadcasting field in Victoria.

At the same time, the station said Mel Cooper, longtime general manager of CKNW Radio in New Westminster and vice-prsident of Western Broadcasting Ltd., will join CFAX effective Jan. 1.

Cooper wil lbecome president and general manager of CFAX while station president Clare Copeland will move up to chairman of the board, responsible for developing new projects.

Copeland, in announcing the changes, said CFAX is anxious "to develop a whole new radio station on the FM band to increase our direct involvement with the young people in this city . . ."

An FM application is likely next spring after the new managment group sees the new FM policy expected from the Canadian Radio Television Commission early next year.

Copeland also said he is looking at a number of "new projects" for the station, including new broadcasting studios.

Subject to CRTC approval, Cooper will become a major shareholder in CFAX and will play an important role in the new development company, Copeland said.

HARBOR LAND BUY URGED

The Victoria Labor Council will urge the provincial government to consider buying the Reid Centre and Bapco Paint sites so they won't end up as huge hotel developments on the Inner Harbor.

In making the proposal, Nell Hindle of the Boilermakers Union said it would be a shame if the Inner Harbor is "cluttered with Holiday Inn-type" developments and parking lots.

"Hindsight isn't going to help us 20 years from now," he said.

"Council is divided and we should look to the province for leadership."

On another matter, Hindle said it was "deplorable" the city's two daily newspapers did not have "live bodies" to report last week's annual convention of the B.C. Federation of Labor in Vancouver.

"Victoria Press should be ashamed of themselves for not covering something as important and human as the B.C. Federation of Labor," he said.

The newspapers only provided Canadian Press copy, he said.

"What we got was regurgitated nonsense that some guy in Vancouver thought was important," he said.

Hindle also criticized the CBC for "very limited coverage."

In other business, the labor council was told a steel price dispute between Western Canada Steel Ltd. and contractors will lead to layoffs.

"It looks like labor will come out the worst," said a Laborer's Union delegate. "There will be layoffs this week and next. It doesn't look too bright in the construction industry."

Clerk on Fire

CHICAGO (Reuter) — Anthony Mele, 21, deputy court clerk, said he was doused in rubbing alcohol and set on fire by two youths in a washroom at the City Hall here Wednesday after he refused to hand them his wallet. He was taken to hospital with burns on his chest, face and legs. Doctors said he was in serious condition.

Incentives Urged for Farmers

EDMONTON (CP) — Canada's livestock producers must be given incentives to produce before the prices of meat on supermarket shelves will be lowered, A. M. Runciman of Winnipeg said Wednesday.

Runciman, president of United Grain Growers, told the 350 delegates at the organization's annual meeting that the firm's directors were "appalled" at some of the steps taken by government to reduce the price of food.

The directors were critical of actions to remove the tariff on beef entering Canada from the United States, an export embargo on feed beef and the $5 limit on domestic wheat prices.

These are "misplaced" attempts to provide cheaper food to consumers.

"It is an inescapable law that before consumers can have low prices, producers must have high prices," Runciman said in his annual report.

"With an incentive to produce, a farmer will use special skills on purchased imputs to produce more. The cost of the commodity then will be lowered to the consumer, yet the producer benefits because the better management lowers his cost of production and thus enhances his income."

Federal actions in the livestock field have reduced the incentive to produce beef and wheat and it would have been preferable had the government introduced measures to subsidize the consumer directly at the "taxpayer's expense rather than at the farmer's expense," Runciman said.

this year was the large-scale

Particularly discouraging movement of feeder cattle from the Prairies and the abandonment of livestock production by many producers because of high grain prices.

The UGG president said special measures must be found to reverse this trend and provide a nearby market for Prairie grain for the future when prices return to more normal levels.

"Such measures should not be at the expense of the grain farmer, but at the expense of the country since in the long run it is in the interest of all Canadians."

Runciman told delegates that for the first time, Canadian consumers are conscious that the meat, milk and bread on their table "do not originate at the supermarket."

"They are seeing how policies of overly-cheap food provide no incentive to the farmer and eventually result in shortages and food prices slipping out of control."

SKYLAB WORK BEGINS

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI) — Engineers today begin fitting new stabilizing tail fins onto the Skylab 3 launch rocket to replace a set corroded by salty sea air. The problem caused a five-day delay in getting the space station flight underway.

Skylab 3 pilots Gerald Carr, Dr. Edward Gibson and William Pogue return to their training base at the Johnson Space Centre in Houston this afternoon after only a day at the spaceport to be fitted for their spacesuits.

Space agency officials Wednesday postponed liftoff of the last trio of astronauts to man the orbiting station until 6:36 a.m. PST next Thursday. The crew, set to stay at least a record 60 days aboard Skylab, had planned to blast off Saturday morning.

Temple Must Pay $100 And Reinstate Member

EDMONTON (CP) — A man whose membership in a religious organization was cancelled last year by the group's board of directors was awarded $100 in damages Wednesday and had his membership ordered reinstated.

District Court Judge S. V. Legg awarded the damages and ordered the reinstatement of Daniel Smith in the Temple of Spiritualism after ruling Smith was not (not) guilty of misconduct and that the board acted outside its jurisdiction. Smith, 65, a former president of the religious group, had sought $2,500 in damages.

Court was told that Smith's membership in the group was cancelled when the board said he was guilty of misconduct by interrupting a religious meeting for three minutes to privately speak with the chairman.

Judge Legg said there was no misconduct and that there had been an informal adjournment when Smith talked to the chairman.

Port Closed Early

CHURCHILL, Man. (CP) — Ice conditions at the northern Manitoba port of Churchill were so good this year that vessels could have been handled right up until last week, port manager Earl Scharfe said Wednesday.

Ice was normal or even better than normal, but there were no vessles to load.

Grain shipping at the port ended on Oct. 19 after 34 grain ships had used the facilities. Twenty-four of those ships were from the Soviet Union.

Boxcars Dwindling

EDMONTON (CP) — Canada's railways are not earning enough revenues from grain shipping and have not been replacing boxcars, a situation that has serious implications for farmers, A. M. Runciman of Winnipeg said Wednesday.

Runciman, United Grain Growers president, told delegates at the annual meeting that the number of general-purpose boxcars with six-foot-wide doors declined by 40,000 during the 10-year period 1963 to 1973.

Premier Has Doubts

REGINA (CP) — Many experts are unconvinced that increasing the price of liquor would reduce excessive alcohol consumption, Premier Allan Blakeney said Wednesday.

Speaking at his weekly news conference, he commented on charges by Don Faris, chairman of a special legislative committee on liquor, that the government was dragging its feet on many recommendations made by the committee.

The committee recommended higher liquor prices to reduce consumption.

Games 'Will Pass'

EDMONTON (CP) — A plebiscite on Edmonton's $12-million share of financing the British Commonwealth Games in 1978 "will pass easily" despite a campaign by the Edmonton Taxpayers 'Association, Mayor Ivor Dent said Wednesday.

Mayor Dent was commenting on a statement by association president Eric Reilly that his group will organize a petition to force a plebiscite if city council gives first reading to a money bylaw to finance the share and then doesn't defer a plebiscite until next October's civic election.

FARMER AID APPROVED

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta government has approved a $23-million program to assist farmers who suffered crop damage from summer drought and fall rain and snow that left some crops unharvested, it was announced today.

The program includes a system of interest-free loans of up to $7,500 per farmer, assistance for hay transportation, aid for damp grain preservation, and increased compensation for wildlife damage to crops.

Agriculture Minister Hugh Horner said the package included guaranteed loans of $15 per acre for weather-damaged crops to a maximum of $7,500.

The provincial government will pay the interest for the first year on the loan program. A spokesman for the agriculture department said the loans would be available for farmers suffering losses due to poor harvesting conditions and to severe drought conditions last summer.

Applicants for the loans will be required to sign up for provincial crop insurance.

Dr. Horner said in a prepared statement the program will cost the provincial government $2 million for administration and interest charges.

Thermostats Down—Nixon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon has appealed to Americans voluntarily to spend a slightly chillier, slower-moving, more thrifty winter to stave off what he called the worst fuel shortage since the Second World War.

Nixon also proposed a national program comparable in scope to developing the atom bomb and putting men in space, aimed at making the country self-sufficient in energy by 1980.

Saying a long-forming shortage, plus the effect of the Middle East crisis, will leave the United States short of oil by 2 to 3 million barrels a day, Nixon asked congress Wednesday for more power and asked the people to sacrifice energy luxuries until the pinch is over.

If that does not work, he warned, Americans may have the first direct consumer rationing of gasoline since the 1940s.

Nixon told the nation in a broadcast speech, and in a separate message to Congress, he is ordering that power plants be kept from switching from coal to oil, directing that aircraft get less fuel, asking that Americans turn their home thermostats down to 68 degrees and ordering the federal bureaucracy to use less heat and light and drive government cars more slowly.

He said he is asking that nuclear power permits be expedited and is requesting governors and local officials to do at their level things similar to what Nixon is ordering at the federal level.

"We are heading toward the most acute shortages of energy since World War II," Nixon said.

"The fuel crisis need not mean genuine suffering for any American," he added. "But it will require some sacrifice by all Americans. We must be sure that our most vital needs are met first—and that our least important activities are the first to be cut back. And we must be sure that while the fat from our economy is being trimmed, the muscle is not seriously damaged."

Nixon asked Congress for authority to bring Daylight Saving Time back for the whole year, to ease clean air requirements so as to allow more use of coal, to hold stores to briefer work days, to cut speed limits on federal highways and to produce more oil from federal reserves.

The new laws, presidential directives and belt-tightening could erase the oil deficit in the short run, he said; reducing highway speeds could save 600,000 barrels of oil a day; cooler homes and offices

'I WON'T RESIGN'

WASHINGTON — President Nixon says he has "no intention whatever of walking away from the job I was elected to do."

Nixon said at the end of a national television-radio address on the energy crisis Wednesday:

"I have no intention whatever of walking away from the job I was elected to do. As long as I am physically able, I am going to continue to work 16 to 18 hours a day for the cause of a real peace abroad, and for the cause of prosperity without inflation and war at home."

Ottawa To Buy Crude

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government has empowered a Crown agency to buy crude and refined oil on international markets, increasing speculation that a national petroleum corporation may not be far away.

"I would think within a month we'd know one way or the other," Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said Wednesday.

He told the Commons the Canadian Commercial Corp. (CCC), an agency responsible to the supply and services department, has been authorized to buy all the oil it can to reduce the impact of potential energy shortages in eastern Canada this winter.

He also disclosed Canada is ready to bypass industry and negotiate a government-to-government agreement with Venezuela, guaranteeing long-term crude oil supplies.

Both steps appeared to move the government closer to the concept of a national petroleum corporation, but Macdonald said no decision has been made.

The major task of the CCC will be to buy refined petroleum products wherever available on foreign markets. Any supplies obtained would be stored primarily in defence department facilities and distributed on a most-urgent-need basis if shortages developed.

Macdonald said it is doubtful the corporation can buy

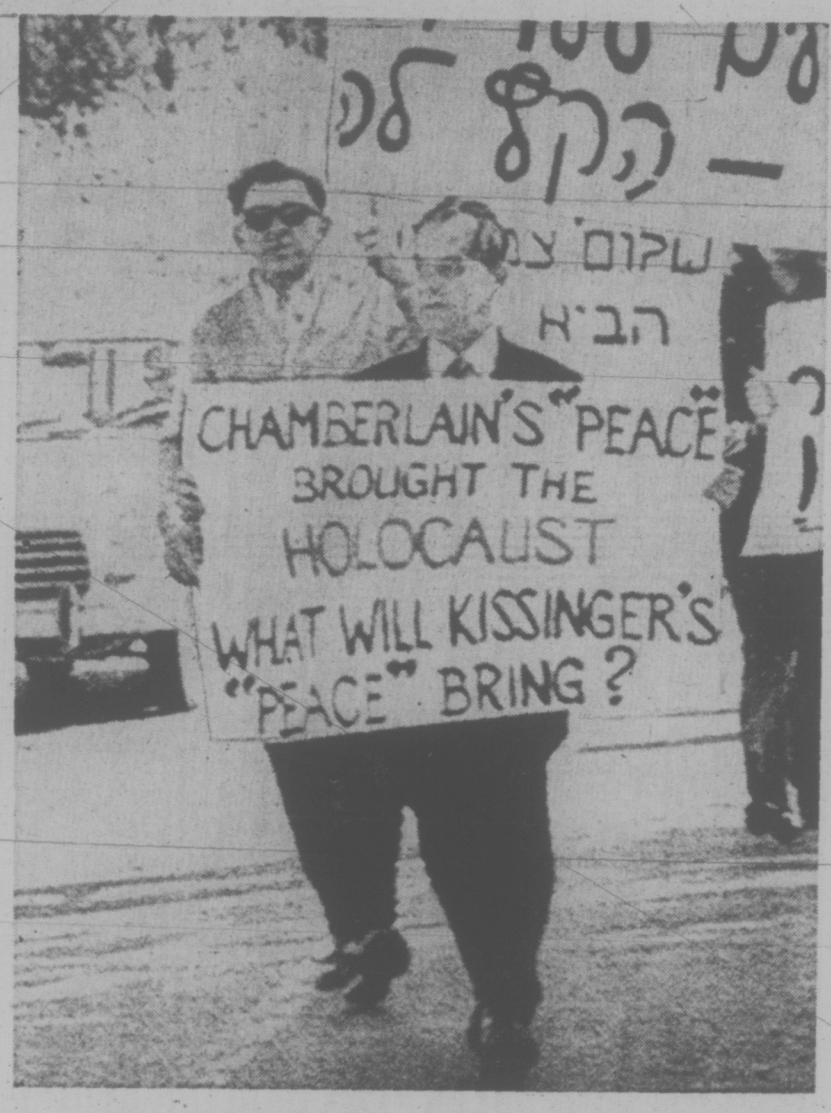
Kissinger Assailed

Protesters outside the Israeli parliament today, denounced the terms of the peace accord accepted by their leaders. They likened U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger to British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain who tried to bargain with Hitler prior to the Second World War.

Israel Takes Truce Terms



Times News Services

Israel today accepted a U.S. truce proposal whereby, government sources said, it would partially lift the encirclement of the Egyptian 3rd Army in return for a prisoner exchange and the end to the blockage of the port of Eilat on the Red Sea.

The peace package was worked out with the Egyptians in Cairo by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and brought to Prime Minister Golda Meir's government Wednesday night by assistant secretary of state Joseph Sisco.

Mrs. Meir's cabinet gave its blessing to the plan in a special morning meeting; she met Sisco for 90 minutes to discuss further details.

He then flew to Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, to join Kissinger.

According to Israeli sources, the plan comes in the following parts:

—Israel will allow a UN-supervised supply corridor to the Egyptian 3rd Army, whose 20,000 men are surrounded on the southern end of the Suez, so long as Cairo does not have full control of the route. No military supplies will be allowed in.

—There will be full exchange of prisoners of war with Egypt, beginning as soon as possible with the wounded. Israel holds about 8,000 Egyptian prisoners while listing about 350 of its men missing on the southern front.

—The Egyptians will lift their blockade of Eilat which has prevented ships arriving fro or departing to Asia.

U.S. officials said the peace talks apparently would involve negotiations between Arabs and Israelis, with perhaps a third party involved.

The U.S. would play an active role in the talks, expected to begin before the end of the year, they said.

Kissinger, in comments to newsmen today before leaving Cairo, said, "the day-and-a-half I have spent here have shown good progress in establishing a framework for a just and lasting peace in the Middle East."

In his Riyadh talks with Saudi Arabia's King Faisal, Kissinger is to discuss both the Middle East conflict and the Arab oil boycott. Saudi Arabia was America's chief Arab oil supplier before the boycott.

HOPE SNOWED IN, ALBERTA FROZEN

Winter flicked at the Fraser Valley's vulnerable spots Wednesday causing several power blackouts and scores of motor accidents. On the Prairies cold records tumbled.

Snow, ranging in depth from two to eight inches brought near blizzard conditions from the Abbotsford-Mission area east to the Fraser Canyon.

A foot of snow fell in the Hope area in the 24-hour period to midnight and caused near-blizzard conditions in the canyon.

Meanwhile centres across the prairies reported the coldest temperatures ever recorded for Nov 7, the fifth consecutive day for record-breaking lows.

Calgary and Edmonton International Airport recorded temperatures overnight of 20 below, the weather office said early today.

Calgary's previous low for Nov. 7 was 12 below in 1919 while Edmonton International Airport, a relatively-new facility, had three below in 1966.

Medicine Hat was 19 below for a Nov. 7 record, 10 degrees colder than the previous mark set in 1936 and 1945.

Lethbridge hit 17 below, breaking the record of 11 below set in 1936.

In Saskatoon, Swift Current recorded 11 below, breaking the previous mark for the day set in 1925 of 10 below. Kindersley dropped to a record of 10 below, 10 degrees colder than the previous record set in 1942.

Tapes Not Audible

WASHINGTON — Parts of the subpoenaed Watergate tapes are very poor in quality, and it is humanly impossible to hear every word on them, President Nixon's personal secretary testified today.

Rose Mary Woods, Nixon's secretary for more than two decades, said that it took her nearly a month, working sometimes on weekends and far into the night, to type a rough transcript of seven conversations between Nixon and figures in the Watergate political espionage case.

"The quality is very bad on some, depending on the room (in which they were recorded)," Miss Woods told Judge John Sirica.

"There are lots of funny things on it. If the president put his feet up on the desk — as he sometimes does — it sounds like a bomb in your ear. Or if someone brings a cup of coffee in and puts it down on the desk . . . it's difficult.

"Sometimes I could hear the president whistling. Other times, there were four people talking at once and I couldn't even get one voice."

Miss Woods said she did not know anything about the white house recording system until its existence was disclosed in testimony before the Senate Watergate Committee July 16.

She said she never heard any of the tapes until the weekend of Sept. 29, when she was asked to go to Camp David to help transcribe them.

"I went up there to try to listen — I use that word advisedly — to take down as much as possible of the tapes that were subpoenaed," she testified.

She said she worked from that Saturday morning until 3 a.m. Sunday, got three hours sleep and worked through until Sunday evening.

"I had gone up there thinking I could finish it in one weekend and came back without finishing one," she said. "And I don't mean one tape, I mean just one conversation."

H. R. Haldeman, Nixon's former chief-of-staff who like Miss Woods has listened to some of the tapes, also was summoned by Sirica to testify at the hearings on the recordings and White House claims that tapes were not made, as previously believed, of two key Watergate conversations by the president.

Miss Woods said she returned to Washington with the president on Sunday, Sept. 30, and continued working on the

MILK PRICE UP A CENT

The price of milk is going up a cent a quart within days and probably another cent will be added in early December, Agriculture Minister David Stupich said today.

Stupich said the increases were necessary because of increased feed costs to the province's dairy industry, particularly hay.

The authority given the B.C. Milk Board to raise prices partially cancels out the federal government's subsidy program which went into effect last month, resulting in lowering the price of milk by four cents per quart.

Stupich said he has notified Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan of B.C.'s intention to raise milk prices.

Formal announcement of the increase should come within days, he said, and will probably take effect immediately.

(The dairy industry on Vancouver Island is facing disaster — unless the government acts soon to save it, according to a Saanichton area farmer. See Page 6.)

Normally, increases in milk prices are announced at the beginning of the month in

Fall Session Ends

The first complete fall session of the B.C. legislature—labelled by opposition members as unnecessary—ended Wednesday after eight weeks of deliberations.

Chief Justice J. L. Farris, acting in place of Lieutenant-Governor Walter Owen, prorogued the house at 6:15 p.m. Wednesday after giving royal assent to 68 government bills.

The session, represented by the government at the outset as being mainly for the purpose of bringing in new agriculture and labor legislation, contained few surprises.

Premier Dave Barrett has gone to great pains to establish the government's policy of having two full sessions per year, thereby giving MLAs a minimum of $24,000 per year and cabinet ministers $48,000.

But opposition parties said throughout the session that nowhere near eight weeks should have been necessary to consider the legislation. It was argued the government dragged its feet preparing the legislation with the result that inordinate time earlier in the session was spent debating housekeeping measures. (For opposition leaders' comments see Page 3.)

The single outstanding legislative measure approved was a new labor code which will govern the collective bargaining practices of labor and management groups in the province.

The bill—the Labor Code of B.C. Act—was subjected to the closest scrutiny of the session with opposition members proposing many amendments, all but one of which was rejected by the government.

The labor legislation's main thrust is establishment of a powerful new Labor Relations Board, which will play a much more active role in direct labor negotiations than did its predecessor.

Also in the labor field was legislation to give the province's civil servants collective bargaining rights for the first time, along with the right to strike.

Agricultural measures included a guaranteed income plan and provision of easier credit for farmers. The government argued these measures, along with several other less significant steps, will encourage farmers to stay on the land which the government froze for agricul-

Smokes Going Up in Cost

TORONTO (CP) — Leading cigarette manufacturers said Wednesday Canadian smokers can expect to pay more for cigarettes and cigars in 1974, if not earlier.

They said sharply higher production costs are exerting upward pressure on domestic cigarette prices, last raised by manufacturers a year ago.

The federal income tax relief they received this year has more than been offset by increases in the cost of services, power and labor in tobacco purchases, manufacturers said.

R. H. Hawkes, president of Rothmans of Pall Mall Canada Ltd., Toronto, said labor costs and the price of leaf tobacco "are the two major factors" influencing cigarette prices at the manufacturers' level. Rothmans is involved in labor contract negotiations.

Charles F. Lombard, president of Benson and Hedges Tobacco Ltd., also expressed dismay about cost increases affecting all areas of the company's production and distribution.

"It extends to the fuel used in our salesmen's cars and in the servicing of cars," he said.

Paul Pare, president of Imasco Ltd. of Montreal, said "we have had very significant increases in paper, oil, services and in the basic cost of tobacco." These increases have "far exceeded" the relief provided by reduced federal income taxes.

Ontario tobacco growers, however, dispute that tobacco price increases are a factor in the cost squeeze, saying they are receiving less for their tobacco than they did last year.

Just Staying Alive Is Deadly

OTTAWA (CP)—"Howard insists that we end the food study. All have lost weight and Andrew still has diarrhea, probably because of the excessive amounts of powdered skim milk he was drinking.

"He usually drinks very little milk, but demanded a great deal during the study as he was hungry. I have a miserable cold and have lost all energy for cooking, caring for the house, etc.

"Everyone's temper has been on edge for the past three days—even to the point of argument over portions of food. Jon feels his father shouldn't have more than he.

"Howard and I agreed that we now see why welfare recipients are often sick, seem lackadaisical about finding work they are probably too tired from a poor diet to care and often drop out of retraining."

The preceding statements portray the reactions of one of several families who attempted to live on minimum food budgets drawn up by the agriculture department.

The statements were from Sandra Eddy and lives in Aylmer, Que., with her husband Howard and their sons Jonathan, 10 and Andrew, 3.

Only one family of several tested, Mr.and Mrs. Sikander Turabali and two daughters of Ottawa, say they were able to live comfortably within the confines of the budget, largely because they were used to eating protein-rich lentils instead of meat.

These findings were released Wednesday by the Consumers' Association of Canada following tests with a group of volunteers earlier this year. The report was published in the association's bi-monthly Canadian Consumer publication.

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — A 13-year-old boy who suffered critical injuries in a fight with several other boys in a schoolyard Oct. 12 died in hospital Wednesday.

The boy's father, Leonard Yutronkie, said his son's head was pounded against the schoolyard pavement.

FERRY FLEET FOR $1

WEST VANCOUVER (CP) — The municipality of West Vancouver, for the modest price of $1, has entered the ferry business.

Of course, with inflation, a dollar doesn't buy a very big ferry fleet. In fact, it buys a 12- by 5-foot scow with a seat in the middle and a winch at each end.

But no matter, approximately 40 persons use the manpower Eagle Island ferry daily to cross a 75-yard channel between the island and the mainland.

"The British Columbia government has boasted of having the world's largest ferry fleet," said Mayor Art Langley after council voted unanimously to buy the scow. "Now West Vancouver operates the smallest ferry fleet in the world."

He termed the ferry the ultimate non-polluting service.

"It has no toilets, no holding tanks, no gas and no oil to foul our waters," he said.

The ferry was designed and built by Gordon Keillor, a retired engineer, in 1968 when he and his wife moved to Eagle Island.

He wanted something that could be pulled by chains from either side and could be operated by residents of the 35 homes on the island, said Mrs. Keillor.

Order in the Court! Univac Wants to Speak

By IAN DARLING
Times Staff

When an accused person goes to court today, he appears before a judge, but in future he might also confront a computer operator.

The possibility of installing computers in provincial courts to help judges schedule trial dates is being considered in the attorney-general's department.

Deputy attorney-general David Vickers said in an interview Wednesday the department might use computers to cope with the increasing number of court cases.

The court lists, he said, are "at an unacceptable level."

Vickers said he is aware that in Victoria a lengthy delay often occurs between the time a person is arrested and when he appears in court.

Trial dates now are being set for early 1974.

But Vickers also described the situation here as "no more or less severe than in the rest of the province."

Departmental studies indicate the crime rate in B.C. will increase by 12 per cent each year.

Using computers is one way of dealing with the increase, Vickers said.

It is not the only way.

Vickers said an inter-departmental task force is studying the judicial process to determine how to deal with the crime rate.

The complete judicial system could be revamped as a result of the study, and decisions are expected to be made next year, he said.

Vickers said the study might suggest the department remove from the courts drug possession charges.

Removing them, Vickers thought, could reduce the courts' workload by 30 per cent.

Asked to explain how drug cases could be taken out of the courts since the drug laws are written into the Criminal Code by the federal government, Vickers said: "We might treat it as a medical problem."

Man Killed By Car

An 84-year-old Sooke man was killed at 6:45 p.m. Wednesday when he was struck by a car as he walked in the rain in the 5700 block Sooke near Saseenos Road.

Sooke RCMP said Neils Christian Neilsen appeared to have been crossing the road to his home in the Sunny Shores Trailer Court when he was hit by the car driven by Robert Martin, 27, of 6660 Sooke Road.

He was pronounced dead at the scene by Dr. Brian Perry-Whittingham.

Police said an inquest will be held but no date has been set.

Minister Eases Fears On Goldstream Plan

By BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

Highway widening in Goldstream Park will not begin for at least five years—if it happens at all, Highways Minister Graham Lea said Wednesday.

Lea revealed a memorandum he has received from chief highways engineer J. A. Dennison outlining progress on the total road widening program from Victoria to Parksville.

Under the program, the mile-long stretch of the Trans-Canada Highway running through Goldstream Park would be widened from two to four lanes — a move which has drawn strong protests from local environmental groups since it would require relocation of the salmon-spawning river.

"Depending on funds available," Dennison's memo said, "it will probably take at least five years to complete but more likely seven or eight years might be more realistic.

"We can get by with what we have in the park for a few years and cannot talk about alternatives because not all the surveys have been completed," it said.

It will be at least a year, the engineer said, before enough data has been collected on the Goldstream widening to go to the public, as Lea has promised he will, and present a total picture of the problem.

And Lea was quick to emphasize Wednesday that a great many "ifs" lie in the way of the Goldstream widening.

First it must be determined that no alternative route is feasible, he said, explaining that the present two lanes could perhaps be used as a northbound lane and another route found for the southbound lane.

"Anyway we are committed to four lanes to Parksville but Goldstream or other areas may be excepted," said Lea.

The minister said he didn't know where the Goldstream Park Preservation Society, the group formed to protest the widening, got their information from because there are no definite plans in existence yet.

The problem with leaving two lanes in the one stretch of highway he said, is that a bottleneck could be formed and would prove hazardous.

"But in five years we may not even need a wider highway," Lea said, since the government is looking into alternative forms of transportation, especially public rapid transit systems.

Deaf children identified by new 'D' vest with designer Ian Wallace

Optimists Looking to D-Day

There have been five traffic accidents involving deaf children in Greater Victoria over the past year and when a little girl was killed last July, Optimist Ian Wallace got mad.

Ian drives the bus provided by the Optimist Club of Victoria which daily delivers 17 deaf youngsters to and from their homes and special classes at Frank Hobbs and Doncaster schools.

He has come up with an idea — a brilliant yellow vest with big blue D — the children now wear to warn drivers these youngsters can't hear car horns.

The Duker vest — named after seven-year-old Julie Duker who died after a traffic mishap last summer — has the solid support of parents, has been endorsed by all area police departments and may become an international project of Optimist clubs.

Club president John Pierpoint said samples of the item, which costs $6 and is lightweight washable nylon, have been sent to 13 Canadian and American clubs in the Pacific Northwest to help sell the project and it is now being considered at the headquarters of Optimists International in St. Louis, Mo.

The sleeveless jacket is light enough for summer wear and can be worn over winter clothing. The aim is to have the children wear it at play.

The local club has provided one for each youngster it ferries to school, complete with embroidered name, and "the kids love it," said Wallace.

Pierpoint said he hopes the day will soon come when the Optimist crest is worn on the front.

Planes Must Leave

Victoria Flying Services, described by Mayor Peter Pollen Wednesday as "squatters" on the Inner Harbor, will be given one month to vacate its operating base there.

The eviction order was expected to be given formal city council approval this afternoon, more than a year after an earlier order to quit was issued but never implemented by the city.

Pollen said the firm had been occupying crown land entirely free of charge for three years and as lengthy negotiations between the city and VFS had produced no satisfactory result the city had no option but to move the seaplane operation.

"They refuse to pay any rent until such time as they can be given a long-term lease on the property," he said. "They have been literally squatters on the Inner Harbor at no revenue to the federal government or the city."

The city leases the harbor property from the ministry of transport, and has been attempting to enter a sub-lease arrangement with the firm, which would involve payment of three years' rental arrears.

Company president Bill Sylvester said he had offered to pay the back rent amounting to some $3,000, provided he could be assured of reasonable tenure. But the city had insisted occupancy would be only on a month-to-month basis.

Sylvester, who expressed surprise at the city's latest move, said finding another good harbor location would pose serious difficulties.

But he discounted the possibility that the firm's downtown oepration would have to close.

"I don't think the mayor wants to put us out of business," he added.

Jail Ends Summer Of Crime

Twenty-one-year-old Mark Twiss, no fixed address, was sentenced to 10 months in jail when he pleaded guilty in Sidney provincial court today to a total of 20 charges involving forgery, false pretence and theft under $200.

The charges stemmed from a series of offences in Sidney, Saanich and Victoria between July and September this year.

In addition to the jail term Judge D. G. Ashby ordered Twiss to serve two years probation following his release.

Court Appeal Urged

Victoria city council was urged today to appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada a judgment handed down Wednesday, which requires the city to pay about $55,000 to the Aberdeen Private Hospital for the care of welfare patients.

The judgment, on a 2-1 decision by the B.C. Court of Appeal, upheld a ruling last year by the B.C. Supreme Court.

City solicitor Jake de Villiers said today the reason for the decision against the city appears to be a desire to await the outcome of a similar case already before the Supreme Court of Canada, involving the Park Lane Private Hospital in Vancouver and the city of Vancouver.

A motion recommending appeal to the higher court was on the agenda for today's council meeting.

Teachers Never Saw Their Doctor

By SUSAN RUTTAN
Times Staff

Two teachers who spent nine months in Arizona recovering from a bout of influenza did not see a doctor at any time prior to leaving, county court Judge M. L. Drake was told in an appeal hearing Wednesday.

Greater Victoria school board is appealing a unanimous decision by a three-man board of reference in October, 1972, which reinstated the two teachers.

At noon today the hearing concluded and the judge reserved judgment.

Bona MacMurchie, 63, and Evelyn Ball, 50, both of 3825 Kremlin, had been fired by the school board for "neglect of duty" in July, 1972, while they were still in Arizona. They appealed the firing to the board of reference.

"Neither lady produced or called before the board (of reference) any medical evidence to prove they were ill for the whole period," school board lawyer Brian Smith told the court.

The two women got the flu around the first of October 1971 and were at home until Nov. 9 of that year, when they flew to Phoenix, Arizona, said Smith.

Substitute teachers taught Miss MacMurchie's class at Margaret Jenkins elementary and Miss Ball's at Lampson Street elementary.

The school board claims the two teachers have not proven they were ill for all of the time they were away from the classroom, from October 1971 until the end of June 1972.

During the month they were home with the flu Miss MacMurchie talked several times on the telephone to physician Dr. D. M. Whitley, describing their symptoms and temperatures.

He "prescribed bedrest", said Smith.

'Go to Arizona,' Doctor Said

"They were never examined by Dr. Whitley. They never asked Dr. Whitley to make a house call," he said.

"Not once in the whole time they were in Arizona did they ever consult a doctor," Smith said.

No new evidence is being presented at the appeal; Drake is simple reviewing evidence presented at the closed board of reference hearing last year.

Miss MacMurchie testified that on Nov. 3, 1971, Whitley had advised her in a telephone call to go to Arizona with Miss Ball to recuperate from the flu that continued to bother them.

Smith said Whitley testified he did not recall giving that advice but agreed he might have suggested it facetiously.

The board of reference was satisfied the two women took the advice seriously, said Smith. They left for Arizona six days later.

While in Phoenix Miss Ball and Miss MacMurchie wrote what Smith called "self-serving letters" to Whitley describing their condition.

"We feel we are not ready to tackle day after day of teaching or the cold, damp weather," Miss Ball said in one letter.

Whitley replied only to one of these letters, one in May, said Smith, and the doctor testified it had become obvious he was being used by the teachers.

Asked whether he thought Miss Ball a hypochondriac, Whitley testified "perhaps".

Medical Certificate Refused

In May 1972 the teachers wrote Whitley asking him to complete a form saying they were too ill to return to work. He wrote back refusing, but they never received the letter until months later.

Smith commented on the similarity of complaints mentioned by the two in letters to Whitley — lack of stamina, digestive and nervous upsets.

"You get the impression you're not talking about two people but one," he said.

He cited four other instances between 1967, when they began living together, and October 1971 when the two teachers were off sick simultaneously.

Lloyd MacKenzie, lawyer for the teachers, pointed out the board of reference sat for four days, heard 17 witnesses, received 52 exhibits, and came up with a unanimous decision in favor of the teachers.

He said it was up to the doctor to decide whether the teachers' illness warranted a house call, not for the women to ask him to come.

"Flu was in epidemic proportions in Victoria at this time," he said, and Whitley was pressed for time.

MacKenzie said the doctor set himself against the teachers in early 1972, as he "had decided that they were feigning and that he was being put upon and used".

He said Whitley "had guilt on his conscience" about his method of diagnosing the teachers over the telephone.

Whitley supplied the letters written to him from Arizona to school board officials without the teachers' permission, MacKenzie said.

The lawyer referred to testimony by Dr. Peter Banks that it is "impossible" to diagnose influenza over the phone, and that some kinds of flu can last for six months with some people.

Patient Care Worries Strike-Wary Hospitals

Patient care in Gorge Road extended care hospital will "deteriorate considerably if the Hospital Employees Union forces a strike," B.C. Hospitals Association said today.

"As a result of this threatened strike action, the hospital finds itself in an extremely difficult position because it cannot retaliate by the industrial mechanism of lockout as the patients' welfare is at stake.

"Patients in an extended care hospital cannot be moved to another area and receive proper care as there are no other facilities to receive them," the association said.

Employees of the hospital will be asked at union meetings Friday night and early Saturday to approve an executive recommendation that 72 hours strike notice be served against the hospital.

The 350 employees, members of the Hospital Employees Union seeking a first agreement, voted 98.2 per cent in favor of strike action

The union said it has offered arbitration of the dispute as an alternative to a strike but the hospital refused.

Issues include equal pay, discrimination against women, seniority and an apprenticeship program.

The union has said the hospital wants "discriminatory wage rates" which would see practical nurses paid less than orderlies while it wants equal pay, referring to some successful arbitration cases this year including one at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

The BCHA agreed today the dispute "involves pay rates for practical nurses, among other demands" but said practical nurses are receiving the same pay as orderlies in only three of the 77 hospitals in British Columbia which are covered by HEU certification.

Joe Roberts, employee relations director of BCHA, said the association "has asked the union to accept the same standard contract which is in effect in the overwhelming majority of hospitals in this province."

This, he said, will give Gorge Road employees a retroactive wage increase of $37.50 a month making the lowest wage in the hospital $504 a month.

Fuel Shortage To Boost Food

A fuel shortage will undoubtedly result in a rise in the price of food, Jack Wessel, economist for the B.C. Federation of Agriculture, said today.

Wessel said the agriculture industry in B.C. is one of the major users of fossil fuels and an increase in the cost of gasoline or oil, would be reflected in food prices.

Substituting manpower for fossil fuels won't help things either," he said. "It would also result in an increase in production costs."

Provincial horticulturist Alan Littler said cost of imports from the United States and Mexico would go up if the U.S. government cuts the vehicle speed limit to 50 miles an hour.

"B.C. is dependent on many perishable and non-perishable commodities from the U.S." he said. "If the speed limit is reduced it will mean trucks will take an extra day or more to transport food—fresh or canned—to British Columbia. This means extra wages and the impact will be reflected in food prices."

Wessel said an increase in the price of fuel would also affect Saanich's $1,500,000 greenhouse industry.

"They depend on oil for heating," he pointed out. "This would mean increased production costs for the 2,800,000 pounds of tomatoes grown under glass. The extra costs would have to be passed onto the consumer.

"It is difficult to grasp that a resource so far away as oil can have an impact on food production," he added.

SAVING THE TREES by splitting the traffic was the solution Saanich devised in widening Shelbourne Street. Dual "carriageway," which eventually will extend from Kenmore to Mount Douglas Park, will preserve leafy plane trees planted as a memorial to First World War casualties. There will be two-lanes on each side when project is completed. (John McKay photo.)

The Royal Alexandra

Announcing the beginning of the end

The last self-owned apartments on Beach Drive

Frankly, when we started we never expected to be able to build such an exceptional apartment featuring such spacious and luxuriously appointed rooms throughout, still provide a planned recreation complex that has its own sauna room, exercise pavilion, therapeutic pool, hobby room, freezer room and underground electronically secured parking.

Naturally, the location and setting here on Beach Drive can never be replaced. This is your year 'round view.

Close to the world-famous Oak Bay Marina and Restaurant, a constant parade of graceful yachts and cruisers, lovely Windsor Park, rose gardens and just about anything else you would want at the Oak Bay Village.

As we say . . . each apartment is larger and more luxuriously appointed than you would expect at these prices.

If you've ever wanted a place in Oak Bay now is the time to get it before they're all gone.

Academy Guidance Sought

Oak Bay's zoning committee today recommended amendments to a proposed bylaw designed to protect the 9.38-acre Victoria Riding Academy site from constant "pressure and clamor" for highrise development.

Committee chairman Ald. Brian Smith suggested advice be sought from municipal solicitor Marsh Gordon before the amended bylaw is presented to council for third reading.

After a public hearing on the bylaw Monday, Gordon said amendments recommended by aldermen at that time were too "substantial" for it to pass without another public hearing.

The original belaw was to zone a "recreation-club" area specifically for riding with off-street parking for club members.

The committee recommended the words "club zone" and "riding academy" to deleted and off-street parking be provided for non-members.

At the hearing one speaker quoted a news story which said academy manager Don Carley intended to make $50,000 renovations if the municipality granted him a long-term lease. Carley was not at the hearing but did attend today's meeting.

Smith explained to Carley and his wife that "in turning down the sale of that land (to the provincial government), it follows that the majority of council want you to stay but not to make any major investments."

If given a lease "you may be in more trouble than it's worth" because they would be obligated to pay a "minimum" of $4,400 taxes a year, said Smith.

"I'm putting it to you that a lease is probably not in your best interests. It would be quite a bite in taxes for the academy," said Smith adding it would be more economical for the Carley's to continue operating on a month-to-month basis.

"We don't need any more hardships," said Mrs. Carley who told the committee she and her husband had been in the business since 1923 and operated on the Cedar Hill Crossroad site 24 years.

Asked what repairs were necessary Carley replied, "It all wants repairing."

Carley cited, in particular, the need for a new fence between the academy land and Uplands Golf course.

Oak Bay's engineer-planner Geoff White was asked to look into drainage problems pointed out by the Carleys.

Carley said there are about 300 members, "mostly children," and there are still enough trails in the area to take a 14-mile ride to Mount Douglas Park where riding on the beach is permitted during the winter.

After the Carleys left Smith said the proposed amendments would broaden the zoning to include the academy but would not exclude other types of recreation.

Municipal administrator Ted Hart was asked to redraft the bylaw and a zoning committee meeting was tentatively set for Nov. 15 for further discussion before taking the amended version to full council.

Nanaimo Bank Robbed

The main branch of the Bank of Montreal in Nanaimo was robbed this morning by a scruffily dressed youth whom RCMP described as a "hippie type".

Police said the youth, age about 20, went into the bank on Terminal Avenue at 10:40 a.m. and handed a teller a note demanding money.

A bank spokesman said the youth appeared to be armed though it is not confirmed by police.

After receiving an undisclosed amount of cash from the teller, the youth fled on foot.

Police started a massive search but as of noon today have no suspects.

United Way Totalled

There's a lot of arithmetic involved in a six-week fund-raising campaign and United Way volunteers are spending this week totalling the donations, chairman Murray Glazier said Wednesday.

The campaign ended Nov. 5 and a final announcement on its success will be made following a meeting today, said Glazier.

The campaigners are aiming for $680,000, he said, and last Monday's deadline will not be extended.

Thermostats Down—Nixon

'I WON'T RESIGN'

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — President Nixon says he has "no intention whatever of walking away from the job I was elected to do."

Nixon said at the end of a national television-radio address on the energy crisis Wednesday:

"I have no intention whatever of walking away from the job I was elected to do. As long as I am physically able, I am going to continue to work 16 to 18 hours a day for the cause of a real peace abroad, and for the cause of prosperity without inflation and war at home."

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon has appealed to Americans voluntarily to spend a slightly chillier, slower-moving, more thrifty winter to stave off what he called the worst fuel shortage since the Second World War.

Nixon also proposed a national program comparable in scope to developing the atom bomb and putting men in space, aimed at making the country self-sufficient in energy by 1980.

Saying a long-forming shortage, plus the effect of the Middle East crisis, will leave the United States short of oil by 2 to 3 million barrels a day, Nixon asked congress Wednesday for more power and asked the people to sacrifice energy luxuries until the pinch is over.

If that does not work, he warned, Americans may have the first direct consumer rationing of gasoline since the 1940s.

Nixon told the nation in a broadcast speech, and in a separate message to Congress, he is ordering that power plants be kept from switching from coal to oil, directing that aircraft get less fuel, asking that Americans turn their home thermostats down to 68 degrees and ordering the federal bureaucracy to use less heat and light and drive government cars more slowly.

He said he is asking that nuclear power permits be expedited and is requesting governors and local officials to do at their level things similar to what Nixon is ordering at the federal level.

"We are heading toward the most acute shortages of energy since the Second World War," Nixon said.

"The fuel crisis need not mean genuine suffering for any American," he added. "But it will require some sacrifice by all Americans. We must be sure that our most vital needs are met first—and that our least important activities are the first to be cut back. And we must be sure that while the fat from our economy is being trimmed, the muscle is not seriously damaged."

Nixon asked Congress for authority to bring Daylight Saving Time back for the whole year, to ease clean air requirements so as to allow more use of coal, to hold stores to briefer work days, to cut speed limits on federal highways and to produce more oil from federal reserves.

The new laws, presidential directives and belt-tightening could erase the oil deficit in the short run, he said; reducing highway speeds could save 600,000 barrels of oil a day; cooler homes and offices

Kissinger Assailed

Protesters outside the Israeli parliament today, denounced the terms of the peace accord accepted by their leaders. They likened U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger to British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain who tried to bargain with Hitler prior to the Second World War.

Israel Takes Truce Terms

Times News Services

Israel today accepted a U.S. truce proposal whereby, government sources said, it would partially lift the encirclement of the Egyptian 3rd Army in return for a prisoner exchange and the end to the blockage of the port of Eilat on the Red Sea.

The peace package was worked out with the Egyptians in Cairo by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and brought to Prime Minister Golda Meir's government Wednesday night by assistant secretary of state Joseph Sisco.

Mrs. Meir's cabinet gave its blessing to the plan in a special morning meeting; she met Sisco for 90 minutes to discuss further details.

He then flew to Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, to join Kissinger.

According to Israeli sources, the plan comes in the following parts:

—Israel will allow a UN-supervised supply corridor to the Egyptian 3rd Army, whose 20,000 men are surrounded on the southern end of the Suez, so long as Cairo does not have full control of the route. No military supplies will be allowed in.

—There will be full exchange of prisoners of war with Egypt, beginning as soon as possible with the wounded. Israel holds about 8,000 Egyptian prisoners while listing about 350 of its men missing on the southern front.

—The Egyptians will lift their blockade of Eilat which has prevented ships arriving from or departing to Asia.

U.S. officials said the peace talks apparently would involve negotiations between Arabs and Israelis, with perhaps a third party involved.

The U.S. would play an active role in the talks, expected to begin before the end of the year, they said.

Kissinger, in comments to newsmen today before leaving Cairo, said, "the day-and-a-half I have spent here have shown good progress in establishing a framework for a just and lasting peace in the Middle East."

In his Riyadh talks with Saudi Arabia's King Faisal, Kissinger is to discuss both the Middle East conflict and the Arab oil boycott. Saudi Arabia was America's chief Arab oil supplier before the boycott.

HOPE SNOWED IN, ALBERTA FROZEN

Winter flicked at the Fraser Valley's vulnerable spots Wednesday causing several power blackouts and scores of motor accidents. On the Prairies cold records tumbled.

Snow, ranging in depth from two to eight inches brought near blizzard conditions from the Abbotsford-Mission area east to the Fraser Canyon.

A foot of snow fell in the Hope area in the 24-hour period to midnight and caused near-blizzard conditions in the canyon.

Meanwhile centres across the prairies reported the coldest temperatures ever recorded for Nov 7, the fifth consecutive day for record-breaking lows.

Calgary and Edmonton International Airport recorded temperatures overnight of 20 below, the weather office said early today.

Calgary's previous low for Nov. 7 was 12 below in 1919 while Edmonton International Airport, a relatively-new facility, had three below in 1966.

Medicine Hat was 19 below for a Nov. 7 record, 10 degrees colder than the previous mark set in 1936 and 1945.

Lethbridge hit 17 below, breaking the record of 11 below set in 1936.

Tapes Not Audible

WASHINGTON — Parts of the subpoenaed Watergate tapes are very poor in quality, and it is humanly impossible to hear every word on them, President Nixon's personal secretary testified today.

Rose Mary Woods, Nixon's secretary for more than two decades, said that it took her nearly a month, working sometimes on weekends and far into the night, to type a rough transcript of seven conversations between Nixon and figures in the Watergate political espionage case.

"The quality is very bad on some, depending on the room (in which they were recorded)," Miss Woods told Judge John Sirica.

"There are lots of funny things on it. If the president put his feet up on the desk — as he sometimes does — it sounds like a bomb in your ear. Or if someone brings a cup of coffee in and puts it down on the desk . . . it's difficult.

"Sometimes I could hear the president whistling. Other times, there were four people talking at once and I couldn't even get one voice."

Miss Woods said she did not know anything about the white house recording system until its existence was disclosed in testimony before the Senate Watergate Committee July 16.

She said she never heard any of the tapes until the weekend of Sept. 29, when she was asked to go to Camp David to help transcribe them.

"I went up there to try to listen — I use that word advisedly — to take down as much as possible of the tapes that were subpoenaed," she testified.

She said she worked from that Saturday morning until 3 a.m. Sunday, got three hours sleep and worked through until Sunday evening.

"I had gone up there thinking I could finish it in one weekend and came back without finishing one," she said. "And I don't mean one tape. I mean just one conversation."

H. R. Haldeman, Nixon's former chief-of-staff who like Miss Woods has listened to some of the tapes, also was summoned by Sirica to testify at the hearings on the recordings and White House claims that tapes were not made, as previously believed, of two key Watergate conversations by the president.

Miss Woods said she returned to Washington with the president on Sunday, Sept. 30, and continued working on the

Ottawa To Buy Oil

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government has empowered a Crown agency to buy crude and refined oil on international markets, increasing speculation that a national petroleum corporation may not be far away.

"I would think within a month we'd know one way or the other," Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said Wednesday.

He told the Commons the Canadian Commercial Corp. (CCC), an agency responsible to the supply and services department, has been authorized to buy all the oil it can to reduce the impact of potential energy shortages in eastern Canada this winter.

He also disclosed Canada is ready to bypass industry and negotiate a government-to-government agreement with Venezuela, guaranteeing long-term crude oil supplies.

Both steps appeared to move the government closer to the concept of a national petroleum corporation, but Macdonald said no decision has been made.

The major task of the CCC will be to buy refined petroleum products wherever available on foreign markets. Any supplies obtained would be stored primarily in defence department facilities and distributed on a most-urgent-need basis if shortages developed.

Macdonald said it is doubtful the corporation can buy

MILK PRICE UP A CENT

The price of milk is going up a cent a quart within days and probably another cent will be added in early December, Agriculture Minister David Stupich said today.

Stupich said the increases were necessary because of increased feed costs to the province's dairy industry, particularly hay.

The authority given the B.C. Milk Board to raise prices partially cancels out the federal government's subsidy program which went into effect last month, resulting in lowering the price of milk by four cents per quart.

Stupich said he has notified Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan of B.C.'s intention to raise milk prices.

Formal announcement of the increase should come within days, he said, and will probably take effect immediately.

(The dairy industry on Vancouver Island is facing disaster — unless the government acts soon to save it, according to a Saanichton area farmer. See Page 6.)

Normally, increases in milk prices are announced at the beginning of the month in

Fall Session Ends

The first complete fall session of the B.C. legislature—labelled by opposition members as unnecessary—ended Wednesday after eight weeks of deliberations.

Chief Justice J. L. Farris, acting in place of Lieutenant-Governor Walter Owen, prorogued the house at 6:15 p.m. Wednesday after giving royal assent to 68 government bills.

The session, represented by the government at the outset as being mainly for the purpose of bringing in new agriculture and labor legislation, contained few surprises.

Premier Dave Barrett has gone to great pains to establish the government's policy of having two full sessions per year, thereby giving MLAs a minimum of $24,000 per year and cabinet ministers $48,000.

But opposition parties said throughout the session that nowhere near eight weeks should have been necessary to consider the legislation. It was argued the government dragged its feet preparing the legislation with the result that inordinate time earlier in the session was spent debating housekeeping measures. (For opposition leaders' comments see Page 3.)

The single outstanding legislative measure approved was a new labor code which will govern the collective bargaining practices of labor and management groups in the province.

The bill—the Labor Code of B.C. Act—was subjected to the closest scrutiny of the session with opposition members proposing many amendments, all but one of which was rejected by the government.

The labor legislation's main thrust is establishment of a powerful new Labor Relations Board, which will play a much more active role in direct labor negotiations than did its predecessor.

Also in the labor field was legislation to give the province's civil servants collective bargaining rights for the first time, along with the right to strike.

Agricultural measures included a guaranteed income plan and provision of easier credit for farmers. The government argued these measures, along with several other less significant steps, will encourage farmers to stay on the land which the government froze for agricul-

Smokes Rising In Cost Soon

TORONTO (CP) — Leading cigarette manufacturers said Wednesday Canadian smokers can expect to pay more for cigarettes and cigars in 1974, if not earlier.

They said sharply higher production costs are exerting upward pressure on domestic cigarette prices, last raised by manufacturers a year ago.

The federal income tax relief they received this year has more than been offset by increases in the cost of services, power and labor in tobacco purchases, manufacturers said.

R. H. Hawkes, president of Rothmans of Pall Mall Canada Ltd., Toronto, said labor costs and the price of leaf tobacco "are the two major factors" influencing cigarette prices at the manufacturers' level. Rothmans is involved in labor contract negotiations.

Charles F. Lombard, president of Benson and Hedges Tobacco Ltd., also expressed dismay about cost increases affecting all areas of the company's production and distribution.

"It extends to the fuel used in our salesmen's cars and in the servicing of cars," he said.

Paul Pare, president of Imasco Ltd. of Montreal, said "we have had very significant increases in paper, oil, services and in the basic cost of tobacco." These increases have "far exceeded" the relief provided by reduced federal income taxes.

Ontario tobacco growers, however, dispute that tobacco price increases are a factor in the cost squeeze, saying they are receiving less for their tobacco than they did last year.

Just Staying Alive Is Deadly

OTTAWA (CP)—"Howard insists that we end the food study. All have lost weight and Andrew still has diarrhea, probably because of the excessive amounts of powdered skim milk he was drinking.

"He usually drinks very little milk, but demanded a great deal during the study as he was hungry. I have a miserable cold and have lost all energy for cooking, caring for the house, etc.

"Everyone's temper has been on edge for the past three days—even to the point of argument over portions of food. Jon feels his father shouldn't have more than he.

"Howard and I agreed that we now see why welfare recipients are often sick, seem lackadasical about finding work, they are probably too tired from a poor diet to care and often drop out of retraining."

The preceding statements portray the reactions of one of several families who attempted to live on minimum food budgets drawn up by the agriculture department.

The statements were from Sandra Eddy and lives in Aylmer, Que., with her husband Howard and their sons Jonathan, 10 and Andrew, 3.

Only one family of several tested, Mr.and Mrs. Sikander Turabali and two daughters of Ottawa, say they were able to live comfortably within the confines of the budget, largely because they were used to eating protein-rich lentils instead of meat.

These findings were released Wednesday by the Consumers' Association of Canada following tests with a group of volunteers earlier this year. The report was published in the association's bi-monthly Canadian Consumer publication.

AS HUTCHISON SAW IT

Former Times editor Bruce Hutchison has just completed a visit to Washington where, in what is perhaps the U.S. capital's deepest crisis of the century, he has talked with political leaders, expert analysts and the man-in-the-street. Based on his informed observations, a penetrating series of articles begins on page 4 of today's Times portraying what is now happening in the United States, and what it may mean to Canadians.

FERRY FLEET FOR $1

WEST VANCOUVER (CP) — The municipality of West Vancouver, for the modest price of $1, has entered the ferry business.

Of course, with inflation, a dollar doesn't buy a very big ferry fleet. In fact, it buys a 12- by 5-foot scow with a seat in the middle and a winch at each end.

But no matter, approximately 40 persons use the man-powered Eagle Island ferry daily to cross a 75-yard channel between the island and the mainland.

"The British Columbia government has boasted of having the world's largest ferry fleet," said Mayor Art Langley after council voted unanimously to buy the scow. "Now West Vancouver operates the smallest ferry fleet in the world."

He termed the ferry the ultimate non-polluting service.

"It has no toilets, no holding tanks, no gas and no oil to foul our waters," he said.

The ferry was designed and built by Gordon Keillor, a retired engineer, in 1968 when he and his wife moved to Eagle Island.

He wanted something that could be pulled by chains from either side and could be operated by residents of the 35 homes on the island, said Mrs. Keillor.
